PREFACE.

THE collection of documents here printed, nearly all of them for the first time, enables us to realize to some extent how the ornaments of a great church were acquired, augmented, and lost, in the course of centuries.

Such a collection is of the greater value and interest, not only on account of the range of time covered, but because so few of our great churches have preserved even an isolated record of the same kind.

Although the series under notice contains only one general inventory earlier than that taken at the suppression of the Benedictine monastery (a very full one of the ornaments, jewels, and relics of the church in 1316 which were handed over to a new sacrist five years later) it is possible from other documents to show what important additions were made to the list during the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, chiefly through the liberality of divers benefactors.

Besides these, we have during the opening years of the sixteenth century a series of inventories of certain chapels in the church. They have fortunately been preserved, with other interesting particulars, in a memorandum book of one of the officers of the monastery, and contain much new and valuable information not to be found elsewhere.

Finally all these documents converge upon the second of the general inventories, that made in 1540, when the Monastery was suppressed, and the Prior and Convent replaced by a Dean and Chapter of secular canons.

This inventory was taken too late to include the riches of the shrine of St. Thomas and other relics of which the church was despoiled in 1538, but notwithstanding it is a document of great interest and importance.

The eight inventories of later date, written at intervals from 1563 to 1761, illustrate in a remarkable way the gradual loss of the ancient ornaments, and their replacement by others more adapted to the changed and changing order of things.

Since each of the documents printed, as well as its contents, is fully described in the text, there is no need of further notice of them here. It has, however, been thought well to add an introductory chapter on the Judaizing; of which evidence is to be seen in the great Inventory of 1315-16.

In conclusion the Editors desire to record their indebtedness to the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury for affording them every facility in their investigations. They also owe much to the unfailing courtesy and help of the late Dr. J. Brigstocke Sheppard, through whose care and energy so many of the monastic records were rescued from destruction in the stoneyard to which they had been relegated many years ago.

NOTE.—The initials of the Editor are appended to the document for which he is responsible.

INTRODUCTION.

It can hardly be doubted that, before the accession of Constantine the Great had given peace to Christians, the Church had already borrowed largely from the Synagogue; not, however, from the Temple. The points in which the Church so closely resembles the Synagogue, and which justify us in saying that they must have been borrowed directly from the Synagogue, were seen in actual use by the early Christians, who transferred to the Church from the Synagogue the usages to which they were accustomed. But the usages of the Temple were not so directly transferred. They could not long have been seen in actual use, for the Temple was destroyed in the first century; and the imitation of Temple customs, introduced in the dark ages or the early middle ages, must have been from study, not by actual contact. They must have been based upon the description of the Levitical ceremonies and ornaments to be found in the Vulgate, aided by works like the Epistle of St. Jerome to Fabiola, de vestitu Sacerdotum. From the beginning of the seventh century onwards, still greater influence in this direction must have been exercised by the work of St. Isidore of Seville, de ecclesiasticis officiis. Christian customs and observances, even in what seem to us impossible cases, are derived by St. Isidore from some source in the Old Testament or in Jewish practice. The custom of having a quire to lead the singing, the observance of Lent, the different ranks of the clergy, the use of holy oil in anointing kings and priests, are all carried back to a Mosaic source. No one will hesitate to acknowledge the very great share which this writer had in forming the opinions held in the middle ages. When the forged decretals appeared in the middle of the ninth century it will be remembered that they were published under the name of St. Isidore, a circumstance which is a great testimony to the regard in which his writings were held. His Etymologies were widely read; and though his work on church offices does not seem to have had an equally large circulation, yet its authority must have been very great.

In judging of the origin of the ceremonies attributed to Levitical influence some caution is needed, and a superficial resemblance is not all that is wanted to show a direct imitation. The eagerness of the mediaeval western ritualists to see a direct transplanting of customs sometimes led them astray. They may be readily excused for seeing a connexion between the fasts of the fourth, fifth, seventh, and tenth months,<sup>1</sup> and the quattuor tempora of the local Roman church, for which Dom Germain Morin has found a pagan origin.<sup>2</sup> But it is not so easy to overlook the ascription of the Levitical colours and vestments to the Christian, to which the former answer in so small a degree. Other things, however, such as the rationale of the bishop, the seven-branched candlestick in the quire, the fringing of vestments with bells and pomegranates, seem hard to explain save on the theory of direct imitation. Between these two extremes, of admitted impossibility and the highest degree of likelihood, there are a number of customs which, with the known desire of the mediaeval ritualists to approximate their ceremonies to those of Leviticus, may not improbably be due to direct imitation.

Some of these ceremonies attributed to Levitical influence appeared in the Christian Church for a season, and then disappeared; such as the rationale for bishops, and the large seven-branched candlestick, which have just been spoken of. Others seem to have made good their position, and are retained in the Roman rite to this day; such as the position of the hands of the celebrant at Hanc igitur oblationem of the Gregorian canon.

Some of the ceremonies attributed to Levitical influence will now be discussed one by one.

The small altars, four-square, seen so often in the drawings and pictures of the early middle ages,<sup>1</sup> such as may still be seen in existence around the ruined apse of the abbey of Montmajour, near Arles, may very likely have been suggested by the injunction of Exodus xxvii. 1.

In England it was forbidden by the Penitential of Theodore<sup>2</sup> (668–690) to make steps before the altar, just as it is forbidden in Exodus xx. 26; such absence of steps remained in a large number of churches in England in the middle ages, a point to which Mr. J. N. Comper has called attention.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> For example in the Alcuin Club Collections I. on English altars (edited by W. H. St. John Hope, 1899), the altars up to the fourteenth century are four-square, or intended to be four-square. Such small square altars, or, to speak more correctly, holy tables, seem to be still the custom of the East.

The veils around the altar which are nowadays called ridells, and which were considered so important in the later middle ages that they were part of the furniture of an altar in a portable "chapel," or set of ornaments that a prelate carried about with him,<sup>2</sup> may be derived from the curtains of the tabernacle, spoken of in Exodus xxxvi. through the curtains of the ciborium of the Roman basilica, which even now in many cases shows the rings for holding up the curtains still remaining on the rods which join the capitals of the pillars.

Part of this following of the Mosaic curtains may be the Lenten veil which divided the presbytery from the quire.

If the light in the church kept continually burning were not derived directly from the Synagogue, it seems perhaps possible that it is due to an imitation of the lamp ordered in Exodus xxvii. 20, or of the fire on the altar ordered in Leviticus vi. 13. It is spoken of by Durandus.<sup>3</sup>

A list of the seven-branched candlesticks formerly adorning many of our great churches in England and on the continent is given below<sup>4</sup>; though unfortunately most of them have disappeared. Those yet remaining, of which we have one large example in the Dom at Brunswick, and a smaller at Magdeburg, show that the Jewish seven-branched candlestick sculptured on the Arch of Titus has influenced their construction; while the seven-light chandelier at Lyons, figured by Le Brun Desmarettes,<sup>1</sup> shows no trace of this influence, being a mere beam on which seven candles were placed. It was, however, placed "entre le Choeur & le Sanctuaire au milieu," much as the branched candlesticks were. There can be little hesitation in attributing this widespread appearance of seven-branched candlesticks to an imitation of the Mosaic candlestick described in Exodus xxv. 31.

The holy water stoup at the entrance of a church seems to point to the brazen laver of Exodus xxx. 18; which is, however, connected by Innocent III. with the washing of hands before the missa fidelium,<sup>2</sup> a custom which we know existed as early as the time of St. Cyril of Jerusalem.

It is now generally acknowledged that white was the English liturgical colour for Lent in the later middle ages<sup>3</sup>; and there is evidence of the use of this same colour in France<sup>4</sup> and Spain<sup>5</sup> and elsewhere for the same season. It seems very possible that the vestes albae of the high priest on the great day of atonement<sup>6</sup> may have suggested this Lenten colour.

The four cardinal liturgical colours, white, black, red, and green, are derived by the mediaeval ritualists from the five Mosaic, "aurum, et hyacinthus, et purpura, coccusque bis tinctus, et byssus."<sup>1</sup> Perhaps the best known passage dealing with this point is that of Innocent III., who disposes of the difficulty of the numbers by leaving out aurum.<sup>2</sup> It does not seem to have occurred to him that aurum and byssus are materials, not colours; or that the other three names, even if allowed to be colours, could convey no certain ideas either in Hebrew or in Latin.

The same sort of violence has to be used with the Christian vestments to force them into anything at all like the Mosaic. In the work of Pseudo-Alcuin,<sup>3</sup> a writer often assigned to the eleventh century, the vestments for the simple priest had already become six in number: the amice, the alb, the girdle, the stole, the maniple, and the chasuble. To accommodate these to the ornaments of the second order of the Levitical priesthood, he has to leave out the stole and the maniple, admitting that nothing like these may be found in the old law. But he connects the ephod with the amice, an ornament of rather late introduction into the church, for he says: Superhumera le quod Hebraice Ephod dicitur . . . amictum vocamus. It may be that the amice was introduced as a copying of the ephod.<sup>1</sup> But the ephod has but small resemblance to the amice: it is a sort of jacket, put on last of all, by the high priest, not by the priest of the second order, and not of linen but of the five Levitical materials or colours.

With the alb there is more success. There is considerable likeness in this to the tunica linea; and it seems possible that the sleeves of the old linen vestment, seen in the mosaics at Rome and Ravenna to be almost as wide as those of a modern surplice, may have been tightened in imitation of the Jewish tunica linea. The girdle of the alb evidently performs much the same office as the Hebrew balteus, though not of the same length, nor the same material. Long buskins, similar to those found in the tomb of an Archbishop at Canterbury,<sup>2</sup> might without extraordinary forcing, perhaps, be allied to the feminalia linea, as Pseudo-Alcuin joins bracata. But he wisely leaves the chasuble alone, and makes no attempt to bring it within the circle of Levitical ornaments.

Walafrid Strabo is less cautious than Pseudo-Alcuin. He tells us that vestments have been added either in imitation of those which the priests of the old dispensation wore, or to show forth some mystical significance. Those which we use now, he says, correspond in number to the old. And he gives a list of eight : the Levitical, which correspond to the Christian, rank thus : Tunica, dalmatica. Superhumeralis linea, alba. Superhumerales, mappula. Rationale, orarium. Balteus, cingulum. Feminalia, sandalia. Tiara, casula. Lamina, pallium.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> It has occurred to me that if we assume, as is done in some quarters, that the amice began as a covering to the head, it may be suggested that it is a copy of the high priest's linen tiara, with its lamina aurea transferred into the apparel. The objection to this opinion is the want of satisfactory evidence that at its first appearance the amice was a head-dress; though in the later middle ages there is plenty of evidence that it was then a head-dress, and thus worn until the more solemn parts of the service were entered upon. The rubrics at vesting in different mass books also refer to the amice as a head covering.

<sup>2</sup> Vetusta Monumenta, published by the Society of Antiquaries, 1893, vol. vii. part i. p. [6], plate IV, edited by W. H. St. John Hope.

This is not a bad example of the lengths to which a mediaeval ritualist could go when a point already decided had to be defended. What relations could the lamina on the tiara of the Jewish high priest have to the episcopal pall? or the tiara to the chasuble? The girdle may indeed represent the balteus, and we have seen that Pseudo-Alcuin perhaps detected some analogy between long buskins and the feminalia. But who can see any resemblance between the stole and the high priest's breast plate? or the maniple and the ephod?

But in approaching the tunicle or dalmatic of the bishop there seems indeed some ground for allying it to the hyacinthine tunicle. In the early mosaics at Rome and Ravenna which give us such good evidence of the clerical dress, the pope or bishop wears only a surplice or alb (distinguishing between these by the width of the sleeves) the chasuble, and the pallium. The episcopal tunicle appears much later, and is attributed to Gallican influence. Instances are given in the text below of the episcopal tunicle being blue in colour or approaching to blue<sup>2</sup>; but, curiously enough, the instances of the use of bells as a fringe to a vestment are not seen in tunics. Bells are found as fringes to other vestments, mainly copes, and also, Dr. Bock tells us, chasubles and stoles.<sup>1</sup>

The mediaeval breastplate or rationale is another ornament the source of which hardly admits of any other explanation than a copying of the Aaronic vesture. Some of the best examples are to be found in the sculpture which adorns the cathedral church of Rhemes, especially the portal of the north transept of that church. Most of the figures that wear archiepiscopal palls wear also breastplates. In the figure of St. Sixtus in the north portal the breastplate is clearly hung by chains as in the Aaronic ornament. The precious stones are twelve in number, but they are arranged in three rows of four stones, not as in the Jewish rationale in four rows of three stones.

In the representation of Italian bishops, the chasuble has often at the top of the orphrey which is called the "pillar," a broad piece of stuff giving the appearance of a tau to the pillar, an appearance which may be a survival of the mediaeval breastplate once common amongst bishops.<sup>2</sup>

The anointing of bishops and priests amongst the Westerns at their ordination is considered by many to be a copying of the anointing of Aaron at his consecration, described in Exodus xxix. 7. So also the

<sup>2</sup> The Greeks are said to dislike the copying of the Levitical rites by the Latins: and until further evidence be offered there seems no good reason to connect the leathern scapulary found in a tomb in a church at Moscow with the imitation of the Jewish breastplate. OF

CHRISTCHURCH, CANTERBURY.

I. ECCLESIASTICAL ORNAMENTS OF THE CHAPEL OF THE ARCHBISHOP, 1294 AND 1328.

It was customary from an early date for an archbishop or bishop to have for the performance of his duties as bishop a set of ornaments which he could take about with him. These ornaments were collectively known as his capella or "chapel," and included all the articles necessary for the pontifical offices, and sometimes the sompter horse or horses that bore them from place to place, and the chests in which they were carried.<sup>1</sup>

These ornaments were often the private property of the bishop, but more generally they were borrowed from the treasury of the cathedral church,<sup>2</sup> and a formal indenture or other deed drawn up on their receipt, which was given up on their restoration.<sup>3</sup> Such a document is

<sup>2</sup> Mr. Micklethwaite points out that if the bishop were a monk, he had in theory no private property, so borrowed a "chapel" from his chapter until he could buy one out of the revenue he hoped to receive from his See.

entered in the same register and on the same page as the list under notice, and enumerates certain episcopal ornaments lent to Robert, a monk of Christchurch, Canterbury, consecrated bishop of Clonfert in 1296, who undertook to return them within three months of a demand that he would do so. The ornaments include a set of vestments for the bishop, with mitre, gloves, and foot-gear, a chalice, a mass-book and a pontifical. The text of the document is as follows :

Pateat universis per presentes quod nos R. miseracione divina Clonfertensis episcopus recepimus ex causa mutui a venerabilibus viris Priore et Conventu ecclesie Christi Cantuar' Mitram unam brudatam sine gemmis casulam unam de rubeo samicto Tunicam et dealmaticam [sic] Capam chori de rubeo samicto tres albas paratas cum amictis stolam et manipulum de serico consutis Cyrotecas de serico Sandalia de albo samicto brudat' cum sotularibus de viridi samicto brudat' Calicem unum deauratum qui ponderat j. marc' missale unum et librum unum qui dicitur pontificale que omnia salvo et secure custodiemus et eisdem restituemus infra tres menses postquam super hoc fuerimus requisiti. In cujus rei testimonium has literas nostras fieri fecimus sibi patentes Dat' Cantuar' In vigilia Assumpcionis beate Marie virginis Anno Domini M<sup>o</sup>. CC<sup>o</sup>. Nonagesimo sexto.<sup>1</sup>

Sometimes we find that special ornaments were bequeathed by an archbishop or bishop for the use of his successors, and these may have formed part of the chapel, e.g. it is recorded that on the feast of St. Jerome, 1315, on the application of archbishop Walter (Reynolds) there were lent to him by the prior and convent of Canterbury :

mitra preciosa et baculus pastoralis cedrinus quos bone memorie dominus Johannes quondam Cantuariensis Archiepiscopus legavit ecclesie Can<sup>t</sup>. et successoribus suis per verba subscripta in testamento suo contenta 'Do et lego ecclesie nostre Cantuar' et successoribus nostris Mitram nostram preciosam et baculum nostrum pastorem cedrinum que omnia in ecclesia nostra predicta imperpetuum remanebunt' Item vestimentum integrum de rubeo samicto desuper cum ramunculis arborum auro breudat' | videlicet | capa chori | casula | tunica | et dalmatica pro domino Archi-

episcopo. Et tunica et dalmatica pro diacono et subdiacono | que omnia recolende memorie dominus Robertus Cantuariensis Archiepiscopus nuper defunctus legavit ecclesie Cantuar' etc.<sup>1</sup>

A note is appended that the ornaments referred to were duly restored to Richard of Dover, sacrist.

At Durham the bishop's chapel, or at any rate a selection from it, seems often to have been the perquisite of the prior and convent, and an interesting series of such selections, ranging from William de Karilepho (ob. 1095) has been printed by the Surtees Society.<sup>2</sup>

In some few cases a bishop seems to have had more than one chapel. Thus Gervase of Canterbury enumerates among the benefactions of archbishop Hubert Walter "capellam quoque egregiam, quam in testamento suo vocavit principalem, ecclesie dedit." Concerning its fate he shortly adds: "Hanc rex Johannes ecclesiæ subtraxit."<sup>3</sup>

Abbots also appear occasionally to have had a chapel; thus an inventory of the vestry in Westminster Abbey, taken in 1388, describes inter alia: "Capella autem portatilis est una cum ornatu," the contents of which are specified.<sup>4</sup>

The term "chapel" was not restricted to the ornaments of bishops and abbots only. Thus Matthew Paris records under the date 1242, "In recessu vero a Xantonis dominus rex Angliæ capellam suam a properando amisit, id est, omnia ornamenta sacerdotalia preciosissima, et multa alia, quæ longum essent enarrare, præter reliquias."<sup>5</sup> In an early list of gifts to the church of Rochester, it is stated that "Willelmus de Elintune, filius Ansfridi vicecomitis, in obitu suo dedit capellam suam, scilicet albam paratam de viridi ciclade, et stolam et fanum de nigra purpura, et casulam de viridi ciclade, et ampullas et thuribulum argenteum, cum scutella argentea, et cochleari suo argenteo, et philacterium partim de argento cum reliquiis, et calicem deauratum, et palliola plura, et duo candelabra de esmal, quæ omnia sunt ad altare sanctæ Mariæ.”<sup>1</sup>

The earlier of the lists under notice specifies the ornaments of the archbishop's chapel, delivered to Dan Robert of Elham at Norwich on January 7th, 1294-5, and handed over by him on March 7th following to Dan J. of Wye, the archbishop's chaplain, at Lambeth. Some of the ornaments, as the list shows, were those of archbishop John of Peckham, who died on December 8th, 1292. His successor, Robert of Winchelsey, was elected on February 13th, 1292-3, but was not consecrated until September 12th, 1294, and various things from his predecessor's chapel, together with others out of the vestry of the prior and convent of Canterbury, were handed over to Robert of Elham against the return from Rome of the archbishop, who arrived in England towards the end of January, 1294-5.

The chapel included the archbishop's cross, mitre, crosier, gloves, and ring; three gold pall-pins; the sandals, etc.; a chalice and paten, two silver cruets for wine and water, two silver candlesticks, a censer and ship of silver-gilt, an ivory pyx, and a silver crismatory; and various vestments and books, together with the sompter horse and his equipment, and a bell, perhaps for his neck.

On Robert of Winchelsey's death many of the ornaments in this list were replaced in the vestry at Canterbury, and are duly noted in the great inventory of 1315, viz. John of Peckham's cross, mitre, crosier, and ring; the vestments of archbishop Living, the chasuble of Boniface, and queen Eleanor's albe. We thus learn further particulars than are given in the meagre list of the chapel, e.g. that the cross was a crucifix “cum ij imaginibus argenteis,” that the crosier was enamelled with fleurs-de-lis, and that the ring contained a black sapphire “cum octo granis smaragdinis,” and so on.

The second list enumerates the ecclesiastical ornaments lent for the chapel of archbishop Simon of Meopham, and delivered for that purpose in two red and enamelled coffers, on the day of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin Mary, September 8th, 1328, by an indenture made between Dan Hugh of St. Margaret, then sacrist of Christchurch, Canterbury, and Dan Thomas of Woghope, warden or keeper of the archbishop's chapel. Simon of Meopham was consecrated archbishop at Avignon, on June 5th, 1328, and on his return home landed at Dover on September 5th. He therefore received these ornaments for his use three days after, but was not enthroned at Canterbury until the following January.

It will be seen on comparing the two inventories that the chapel of Simon of Meopham included almost all the ornaments specified in the list of Robert of Winchelsey's chapel, and that several of them were the same. They are also more fully described. We are thus enabled not only to identify them in the great inventory of 1315-16, but to see that in some instances the ornament lent in 1328 was not the same one given out in 1294-5. It is interesting to learn, too, by whom the various vestments were worn: there being, in addition to his other pontifical ornaments, a quire-cope, chasuble, tunicle and dalmatic, with albe, amice, girdle, stole and fanon for the archbishop himself; albes and amices, a stole, and fanons, and a tunicle and dalmatic for a deacon and subdeacon; and two handsome copes for the two clerks of the chapel. The three golden pins that fastened the archbishop's pall were jewelled, each with a central balas-ruby between two emeralds and as many sapphires. The chapel, as in the earlier list, included the sumpter horse that carried it, with his bell and equipment.

The list as transcribed from Register Q. f. cxv. is as follows :

II. ECCLESIASTICAL ORNAMENTS IN THE VESTRY OF CHRISTCHURCH, CANTER- BURY, FEBRUARY 2ND, 1315-16.

TEXTS AND RELICS IN CHRISTCHURCH, CANTERBURY, FEBRUARY 2ND, 1315-16.

AMONG the Cottonian Manuscripts in the British Museum is a folio volume of 244 leaves, with an added leaf at the beginning marked 1*. The manuscript is known as Galba E. IV. It contains, in a modern binding, two works which have nothing to do with each other: the one being a Canterbury MS., the other a much earlier MS. formerly belonging to the abbey of St. Edmund at Bury.

A full account of the contents of both works was printed in 1802, in A Catalogue of the Manuscripts in the Cottonian Library, deposited in the British Museum.<sup>1</sup>

The Canterbury MS. begins on leaf 1, and ends on the verso of leaf 186, according to the present numbering; but the old numbering, in Roman numerals, only extends from 1 to cxc (182), though the remaining four leaves are part of the original book. The want of correspondence between the old and new numberings, so far as they go, is due to the loss of seven of the leaves, viz. those numbered lxxvi, lxxvii, cxxi-cxxiv, and cliv. The MS. bears the following title as a heading to the first leaf: Memoriale multorum Henrici Prioris, and is practically a memorandum book of divers matters touching the rights and privileges, the manors and revenues, and possessions of the monastery of Christchurch, Canterbury, compiled probably for and under the direction of Henry of Eastry, prior from 1285 to 1331.

With the contents of the volume in general we have no concern, but among them are (1) an exceedingly full and valuable inventory of the jewels and ornaments in the vestry, and (2) a list of the texts and relics. These are followed by (3) a catalogue of the books in the library,<sup>1</sup> but this does not fall within our scope.

The two inventories have been printed, with many other extracts from the MS. under notice, by Dart,<sup>2</sup> but with divers errors and omissions. He has also divided the texts from the relics, although there is no break in the manuscript, and printed the latter in a separate appendix without any heading or reference.

The inventory begins on leaf 112 (CXIII) and has a Latin heading which may be translated: "The ecclesiastical ornaments in the vestry of Christchurch, Canterbury, on the Feast of the Purification of Blessed Mary in the year of our Lord 1315, in the time of Richard of Sharsted, then sacrist, and John Spicer, subsacrist, namely, in the 31st year of prior Henry.

"All the ornaments and other things within written were delivered by indenture by the said brother John Spicer to brothers Richard of Dover, then sacrist, and W[illiam] of London, subsacrist, on the morrow of All Souls in the year of Our Lord 1321, in the presence of Dan Henry the prior and Denis his chaplain."

This list does not therefore include all the jewels and ornaments which were in the church, but only such as were kept in the vestry, and formally handed over from sacrist to sacrist by indenture when each man died or went out of office. The vestry was and has always been in the northern of the two large apsidal chapels that flank the presbytery. It formerly contained an altar dedicated in honour of St. Andrew. On its north side and entered only from it was the inner vestry or treasury of the church, an added building of late Norman date, where the muniments and more precious jewels were kept.

The jewels and ornaments that were in constant use were kept near the altars at which they were required.<sup>1</sup> Those of the high altar, for example, and of the altars of St. Ælphege and St. Dunstan, were kept in a great cupboard that stood where archbishop Bouchier's tomb now is.<sup>2</sup> The ornaments of St. Thomas's altar, that at the head of the shrine, were no doubt kept in one of the presses that stood in the surrounding aisle, and those of the altar of the Holy Trinity ad Coronam in a cupboard on the south side of the circular chapel wherein this important relic was preserved. The goods of the altar of the Blessed Virgin Mary in the crypt were kept in a vestry formed in the ambulatory behind its reredos; and those of the minor altars in the church in the lockers in the wall beside them or under the altars themselves. It will also be seen from later inventories that the custos martirii, or keeper of the Martyrdom, had the ornaments of several altars in his keeping. Many of the more precious ornaments were kept in the vault under the steps behind the high altar.

The inventory before us fills fourteen leaves and part of a fifteenth, but four other leaves are wanting in the

<sup>2</sup> An agreement was made in 1480 between archbishop Bouchier and the prior and convent that he might erect his tomb "in spatio quod est in boriali parte chori ecclesie nostre inter duas columnas proximas Altari sancti Elphegi ubi nunc Armaria sunt ad res Altaris reponenda," one of certain conditions laid down being "ac eciam quod in eodem spacio ac inter duas columnas saltem unum armarium novum ordinetur in quo res altari pertinentes juxta consuetudinem idonee conservari possunt." (Register S. f. 302 b.) Gostling, in his Walk in and about the City of Canterbury, adds to his account of this agreement: "accordingly at the head of this tomb there is a cupboard which might serve for that purpose, and did so in some measure, till the tapestry, behind which it was concealed, was taken away and the new wainscoting at the altar quite shut it up." (Edition of 1774, p. 174). Gostling elsewhere (p. 175) speaks of it as "a little cupboard, made for quite another purpose" than the exhibition of relics. All traces of it have now disappeared.

The chasubles (casule) described in section i. are fifty in number. Most of them seem to have been gifts of various donors, whose names they bear. The list begins with a large black chasuble,<sup>1</sup> formerly archbishop Lanfranc's. This and two others that belonged to Lanfranc and a fourth called Henry's (probably Lanfranc's first prior), were of great magnificence, with orphreys enriched with gems and pearls. Lanfranc's chasubles, and four copes, also his gift, were so heavily woven or embroidered with gold, that, as we learn from the treasurers' accounts,<sup>2</sup> it was afterwards found worth while, when they were worn out, to reduce them to ashes in order to recover the precious metal. Several other chasubles, gifts or bequests of former archbishops, were adorned with pearls, but of the greater number given in the list, little else is stated than their material and colour.

Section ii. is a list of sixty-two "common copes" (Cappe Communes) as they were called, to distinguish them from those enumerated in the two following sections. That they were not all of ordinary character is evident from the description of the four copes given by Lanfranc that head the list. The first two of these were black in colour<sup>1</sup> and adorned with gems and gold, and each had round the edge fifty-one silver-gilt bells; the morse or fastening of one was set with a great topaz and four enamels. Lanfranc's other two copes were also black, heavily embroidered with gold, with gold "tassels." The fate of these splendid copes has been mentioned above. Eighteen other copes are described as cum tassellis and two pairs as sine tassellis. That these "tassels" were not morses is clear from the fact that one cope cum tassellis aureis had also a morse of ivory, and two others morses with gems. Neither were they hoods, as suggested by Du Cange, since on copes they are always mentioned in the plural number, and one of Lanfranc's copes is described as having two. Sometimes they were embroidered and therefore of silk or other stuff, sometimes of gold and adorned with gems. They were also of no special shape. In the inventory of the cathedral church of St. Paul, London, of 1245, one cope is described as cum tassellis parvis juxta aperturam sub mento gladeolatis magnis gladeolis<sup>1</sup>, and another tassellis trifuriatis cum gladeolis purpureis in limbis aperturæ anterioris capæ.<sup>2</sup> It seems therefore that, when the word is used in connexion with copes, the "tassels" may have been ornamental plates or buttons sewn on to the orphrey, to which were attached the bands or morsers that held the cope together in front. It may be, too, that sometimes the term was applied to the bands themselves.<sup>3</sup> Some of the copes given in the list must have been very splendid, such as that given by Edward I., of red samite embroidered with the story of Joseph, probably of opus Anglicanum; and archbishop Kilwardby's, embroidered all over with gold with standing images. Two given by archbishop Hubert were enriched with seed pearls (perulis). Five copes given by Katherine Lovel were "sewn with the arms of divers persons," and a white cope was ornamented with the arms of the king of Scotland.

It was one of the privileges of the church of Canterbury to receive from every suffragan bishop of the southern province on his consecration, whether it took place at Canterbury or elsewhere, a decent cope and a profession of canonical obedience. Hence the copes so given were called "profession-copes," and sections

<sup>3</sup> At St. Paul's a few of the richest chasubles had tassels. One, for example, was of purple-red cum nobili tassello in interhumerali breudato Agno Dei cum duobus esmallis magnis et rotundis et cristallis cum literis interpositis. Another had tassellus brevis a quo ingrediuntur iiii<sup>or</sup> gladeoli et circumdatur illud per tassellos perlis in cujus medio est lapis vitreus rubeus. And a third is described as aurifrigiata posteriori subhumerali texto leonibus et avibus tassellis anteriori parvo de filo auri tracto cum perulis. A fourth tassellum habet breudatum ymaginis Petri et Pauli et Archangeli Michaelis, and on a fifth in tassello anteriori scribitur litteris Archidiaconus Londoni. (Archæologia, l. 482, 483)

iii. and iv. of the inventory are devoted to a list of these Cape professionum Episcoporum Suffraganeorum et Abbatum. The abbots who gave copes seem to have been those in the diocese of Canterbury only. The privilege in question, though probably of earlier origin, seems to have been definitely formulated and admitted in the year 1072, according to the following statement of the claim, drawn up in the fifteenth century, in one of the registers of Christchurch, Canterbury :

In connexion with this memorandum it is interesting to note that the first profession-cope entered on the list is that of Thomas, archbishop of York, of red cloth diapered, with round and black "tassels" embroidered. As it is the only cope in the list received from an archbishop of the northern province, it was probably that given by Thomas of Bayeux, who held the see of York from 1070 to 1100, and is mentioned in the memorandum. The cope described as the gift of Gerard, bishop of Virdun, of red samite, is included in the list of Cappe Communes, and that of Robert (Orford), bishop of Ely, in the list under notice. The four bishops of Coventry and Lichfield whose names occur in the memorandum, were Robert Stretton (1360-85), Richard le Scrope (1386-98), John Burghill (1398-1414), and John Catterick (1415-19), all of whom are later than the date of the inventory.

The list given in section iii. contains no copes of earlier gift than 1257, except that of archbishop Thomas, already mentioned, and that of Ralph, bishop of Hereford (1234-39), of red samite with "tassels" and enamels in the middle. The third cope, that of Walter, bishop of Bath and Wells, seems to be mentioned again as the ninth in the list. In all sixty-two are enumerated, but little else save the material and colour is given, except in the last two items, which had apparently just been added to the list when the inventory was made. It is curious to notice that out of sixty-two, twenty-five were red, and they were so far "decent" that twenty-two are described as of baudekin. Of the profession-copes of abbots only five are given.

From the regular way in which the profession-copes are entered after 1257, it looks as if no serious effort had been made before to exact their delivery. That the prior and convent occasionally had some trouble in obtaining them is shown by the appointment in 1362 of a proctor to demand from suffragan bishops and their executors the profession-cope which each was bound to deliver.<sup>1</sup> In 1363 proper acquittance was made to the executors of John of Sheppey, bishop of Rochester, and of Michael of Northburgh, bishop of London, for the profession-copes due by those prelates, but not delivered in their lifetime.<sup>2</sup>

The list of tunicles and dalmatics (Tunice et Dalmatice) given in section v. contains twenty-three pairs. From the descriptions some of them must have been very sumptuous. The first pair, formerly Lanfranc's, is interesting from a difference of colour, the dalmatic being of dark blue (inde) fretted with gold, the tunicle of black embroidered with stars and golden beasts in circles: but dark blue and black are liturgically the same. The second pair was of red samite, the dalmatic embroidered in gold with double-headed eagles, the tunicle with beasts and golden trees of applied work, with "tassels" before and behind. Another pair is described as having four rows of orphreys before and the same number behind. Seven pairs had "tassels," five of them ante et retro, the other two in dorso and in tergo. On one pair the "tassels" were of baudekin, on another they were sewn on (consutis), and in a third pair, which had them on the back, they were embroidered with the martyrdom of St. Stephen on the dalmatic, and that of St. Thomas on the tunicle.<sup>1</sup> From a comparison with fuller entries in the St. Paul's inventory of 1245 before mentioned, where however tassella are not described as on any of the tunicles and dalmatics, it is probable that in the Canterbury inventory the tassella were the transverse bands of embroidery on the breast and back joining the vertical orphreys. They were certainly not the pendent tassels found on later vestments, which hung at the ends of the laces that drew together the elongated slit for the head.

The next two sections (vi. and vii.) in the inventory are of interest, since they prove beyond question that albes were sometimes made entirely of silk, irrespective of the material of the apparels sewn upon them.<sup>2</sup> The first list is that of albes of silk in the vestry (Albe de Serico in Vestiario), and the second that of albes of linen cloth in the same place (Albe de Lineo panno in Vestiario). Of the silk albes there were twenty-three, and all save one, that was St. Thomas's, had embroidered apparels. Fourteen were of diapered or flowered silk, two of sindon, and one of white samite. Five were of plain silk. Of linen albes one hundred and fifteen are enumerated. According to a summary at the end of the list they were divided into three classes: (1) those of <sup>1</sup> This pair, coloris de pounaz (whatever that may be), was probably, from its ornamentation, for use on feasts of martyrs.

<sup>2</sup> An inventory of the jewels and ornaments in the cathedral church of Winchester, made in or about 1538, mentions: "Item xij albes of silke. Item of lining albes belonging to the sextre and other Alters, 326." The inventory of the Lady Chapel includes "Item xij albes & iij of them white silke. Item iij collars (i.e. amice-apparels) for y<sup>e</sup> iij Albes of silke garnished with plate of silver & gilt & with stones." MS. C.C.C.C. cxi. 355-358.

linen with embroidered apparels; (2) those with apparels sewn and woven; and (3) common albes with apparels of divers colours. Of the first class there were fifty-four, of the second thirty-two, and of the third twenty-nine, making a total, with the silk albes, of one hundred and thirty-eight.<sup>1</sup> The albes themselves call for no special comment; it will be seen, however, that like the chasubles and copes, most of them were gifts. Three albes are actually described as respectively of green cloth of Tharsus, of red samite embroidered with shields and popinjays, and of red sindon embroidered with white roses of silk in golden frets. From these and similar loosely worded entries it has been asserted that albes were sometimes coloured,<sup>2</sup> but it is obvious that the apparels are really what are being described and not the albes, even when so deliberate a statement is found as: "Item. Fourteen red albes. Item. Fourteen green albes with counterfeit cloth of gold. Item. Four Albes called Ferial White. Item. Seven Albes called ferial black," from the inventory of Peterborough.<sup>3</sup>

The section (viii.) enumerating the amices (Amicti) shows that the sixty-three at Canterbury were of unusual richness. One formerly belonging to St. Thomas was ornamented with gems, and a second amice was even more precious, while a third was decorated with enamelled plates. Even the sixty in ordinary use had apparels "of orphrey work ornamented with gems."<sup>4</sup>

Of stoles and fanons (section ix.) there were twenty-three pairs, i.e. sets. Several of them were adorned with gold plates and gems, and embroidered with pearls.

<sup>1</sup> The numbers are wrongly given in the summary as 53, 28, and 29, respectively, which with two added items only makes 110; or with the silk albes, which are also wrongly enumerated, 132. The actual totals are 115 and 138.

Section x. contains a list of "ecclesiastical ornaments in the custody of the four subsacrists" (ornamenta ecclesiastica in Custodia quatuor Subsacristarum). They appear to be such as were in daily use at the high altar and the two side altars of St. Dunstan and St. Ælphege, and include sets of white vestments, of red for martyrs, of green for confessors, of black for masses for the dead, and sets for feasts of relics and of virgins, the colours of which are not given. With the exception of the two last-named, each set contained two or more copes in addition to the usual chasubles, tunicles, dalmatics, stoles, fanons, and mantles for carrying the paten. One cope, two stoles, and four fanons were for ferial use. There were also palls and frontals for the three altars, silk veils for carrying the paten or relics, two wooden staves for the chanters for daily use, a cloth for the massbook on greater feasts, and another for daily use, fourteen old copes for boys and sixty-four albes with amices for the ministers, three small towels, two epistle books, an ivory pix for hosts, and two books of offices for the dead. The whole list is one of great interest.

The two next sections (xi. and xii.) specify a large number of new vestments that were either offered or made during the time of prior Henry (Nova vestimenta Oblata tempore H. Prioris and Nova vestimenta in vestiario facta tempore H. Prioris).<sup>1</sup> Of the former there were eight suits and several single vestments, including a rich suit of blue cloth with golden fleurs-de-lis given by Philip, king of France, who also bestowed on the church another suit of red samite with orphreys of France, that is blue with gold fleurs-de-lis. Two suits that once belonged to archbishop Robert of Winchelsey deserve notice. The one was of red samite embroidered with golden trees or branches with orphreys worked with pearls, and included a chasuble, a cope, a tunicle and a dalmatic for the archbishop, and a second tunicle and dalmatic for a deacon and subdeacon.<sup>1</sup> The other suit was of white diaper, and contained like vestments for the archbishop, deacon and subdeacon, together with an albe, amice, stole and fanon, and a second albe of buckram with the amice and white apparels embroidered, the price of which was 20s. The second list includes some eighteen suits, to which a later scribe has added twelve special benefactions all apparently of considerable value. One alone of these contained eight complete suits. The word "vestment" in both lists is used for a suit and not a chasuble only, for it also generally includes one or more copes, tunics and dalmatics, as well as albes, amices, stoles and fanons to match, and sometimes the corporals and frontals.<sup>2</sup>

It is impossible to say whether the list of new vestments is complete, as four leaves are missing at this point in the MS. What they contained we cannot tell, but probably amongst other things the lists of altar frontals, carpets and such like ornaments.

The remainder of the inventory is written in the original hand and resumes with a list of the crosses (Cruces).

The four first named had gilt and jewelled crucifixes and were for use in processions, the staves being covered with silver. Two portable crosses, that is, capable of being taken to pieces, were for the archbishop's use, and one had a turned staff. The list also includes the great silver gilt cross with two silver images, and a small gold one with a relic of the true Cross, and therefore double barred, both of which belonged to archbishop Peckham, a spear covered with silver to carry the candle at the new fire on Easter Even, and a small gold and jewelled cross with relics.

Section xiv. enumerates six gold chalices and patens (Calices et patene auree), of which the first was a great one with gems in the knot of the chalice, given by king Henry III. Another was the gift of Philip, king of France. Three others were specially used at high mass in quire, at the morrow mass, and at the altar at the head of St. Thomas's shrine. The sixth chalice and paten are a later addition to the list and were formerly archbishop Winchelsey's; their united value was 60 marks, a sum equal to at least £1000 at the present day.

The list of silver chalices and patens (Calices et patene argenteæ) given in the next section (xv.) enumerates seven in the vestry, twenty-seven at various altars, and twenty in different manors; some being gilt and others plain. Three others have been added.

The six crosiers or pastoral staves (Baculi pastorales) in section xvi. are of especial interest. The two first belonged to archbishop John of Peckham; one was of cedar with nine gold angels round the boss, probably "for best"; the other of silver enamelled with fleurs-de-lis, for ordinary use. The third crosier was of white ivory. The fourth was St. Thomas's staff, of pearwood with a head of black horn, and the fifth had a similar head adorned with a few gems. The sixth was archbishop Baldwin's crosier and was also jewelled; it had within the crook the Majesty and a figure of a bishop wrought in silver.

Sections xvi.-xix. contain the other episcopal ornaments, viz. mitres (Mitre), gloves (Cirothece), sandals (Sandalia), and pontifical rings (Anuli pontificales). Of mitres there were twelve, including a gold one given by Henry III. enriched with pearls "within and without" and precious gems, and the best and second-best mitres of archbishop Peckham. The first of these was a golden one with jewels, the other of silver with a cross on either horn. There were seven pair of gloves, one being of linen with silver tassels and embroidered with pearls. The materials of the others are not specified, but five pair had silver tassels, and the first on the list, formerly archbishop Winchelsey's, had square plates on the backs set with pearls and gems. It is uncertain whether the tasseli were silver plates or pendent tassels.

The sandals, like those found in archbishop Hubert's coffin in 1890,<sup>1</sup> were embroidered. Of the three pair mentioned, one was white, another red, and the third blue. Since it was the custom on the death of an archbishop of Canterbury for his best ring to be delivered to the king, the pontifical rings in the list under notice must have been the rings of lesser value of deceased archbishops which were the perquisite of the prior of Canterbury.<sup>2</sup> Two of those enumerated belonged respectively to archbishop John of Peckham and his successor Robert of Winchelsey. The first on the list was set with an emerald and eight lesser stones, but the other five, as usual, contained each a sapphire, alone or encircled by smaller stones. In one case the gem, a black sapphire, was set open in .iiij. cramponibus ex omni parte discooperto. Winchelsey's ring appears to have contained a star sapphire with six small emeralds and as many small garnets.

The next three sections (xxi. xxii. and xxiii.) in the inventory ought perhaps to be counted as one, containing a list of the jewels of St. Thomas (Jocalia Sancti Thome); not jewels that had belonged to him personally, but more probably such as had been offered at his shrine. The first group includes rings only, the second various gems set in gold (lapides in auro situati), the third jewels of lesser value set in silver (lapides in argento). The term lup or loup applied to the sapphires probably denotes such as were uncut or set en cabochon.<sup>3</sup> Several of the gems, it will be noticed, were engraved cameos or intaglios.

The sixteen following sections (xxiv.-xxxix.) include a number of miscellaneous articles such as censers (thurribula) and silver incense ships (vasa ad Thus argentea) each with its spoon, pomes (calepungni) for warming the hands during mass, vessels for holy water (vasa ad aquam benedictam), silver basons (pelves argenteæ), silver ampuls for oil (ampulle argenteæ ad oleum), cruets for wine and water (urcioli ad vinum et aquam), silver candlesticks (candelabra argentea), silver pixes for the hosts (pixides argentee ad hostias), cups for the Blessed Sacrament (cuppe ad Corpus domini), masers (cuppe de murro), chanters' staves (baculi Cantorum), combs (pectines), morses or brooches of copes (morsus Caparum), curtains for (or at) the high altar (curtine ad magnum altare), and cushions (pulvinaria), for use at the same.

Of the censers one is described as cum pennis salamandre, whatever that may mean.

The ampuls form two sets, a greater and a lesser, for the crisma, the oleum sanctum, and oleum infirmorum; the gilt ampul in each set was probably for the cream. Of the cruets four were of crystal, ten of silver were in the vestry, and forty were kept at different altars throughout the church and in the almonry chapel. Two of the candlesticks were portable, to be carried in solemn processions. The cuppe ad Corpus domini were clearly pixes for hanging the reserved Sacrament in over the high altar, for the silver-gilt crown within which the pyx was hung is included in the list. Three of the four pyxes were of gold, and one of them seems to have had a great onyx on the lid and to have contained a smaller pyx, likewise of gold, set with a cameo. The use of the five masers is by no means evident. Perhaps they served for wine and water given to the communicants after houselling. Whether the first on the list had actually belonged to St. Thomas is doubtful, and the same remark applies to the first of the chanters' staves, silver-gilt and adorned with gems. Perhaps both articles had been offered at the shrine or were used on St. Thomas's day. The two jewelled staves of St. Dunstan may have had a like origin or use. The less precious staves were of horn (four) or silver (five) with ivory heads, perhaps in the form of a tau-cross. Two of the combs deserve notice from their valuable character. The first was the gift of king Henry III. and of gold adorned with gems with a black cameo and squared garnets. The second, although of ivory, like the other six, had a silver-gilt plate on each side set with gems. The morses enumerated are forty-six in number, and excepting nine which were of copper, were of gold or silver decorated with jewels or enamels. The two pairs of curtains for the high altar were probably costers, those of red sindon with the arms of the king of England being for ordinary use,<sup>1</sup> and the white pair with red drops for use in Lent. The cushions, of which there were two sets of five small and four large respectively, were for the ministers of the altar (pro ministris altaris) to kneel upon.

The four short sections (xl.–xliii.) specifying the service books include three pontificals, of which one had belonged to archbishop John of Peckham; fifteen mass-books, of which nine were in full and four abbreviated, and the other two were used apparently at the high altar and the morrow mass altar; a grayle formerly belonging to archbishop S.<sup>2</sup>; three porthoses according to the use of Sarum<sup>3</sup>; a lectional of St. Furse; four gospel-books with rubrics de reliquiis Ecclesie et de sonitu; and a book of offices of the dead. There were also three capitularia et collectorium, and five benedictionals containing various offices. A full account of these books will be given in the Glossary.

Section xliv. is a list of the silk cloths and baudekins (panni de serico. et baudekini). The former were sixteen in number, but their use is not clear. The first was very precious and richly adorned with gold and gems, and served for "the cross within the high altar" (ad crucem infra magnum altare). Of the rest, which were all of ordinary character, one of green and another of yellow served for the high altar on feasts of confessors in Lent, and a third, of red samite and six ells long, was used at the same altar. A black cloth with white lions which was for use on Palm Sunday is of a colour rarely found in England, where most dioceses had red for Passiontide.<sup>4</sup>

The baudekins were one hundred and sixteen in number, but there is nothing to show what they were for or how they were ornamented. Twenty-six were red, fourteen murrey, and three green; the colours of the rest are not stated. They were probably used as hangings and carpets.

The next section (xlv.) enumerates the banners borne in the Rogationtide processions (Vexilla pro Rogationibus). The list is headed by the white silk banner of St. Thomas, embroidered probably with a figure of him. The other banners were all heraldic and in pairs, with the arms of the king of England, of the earls of Gloucester (no doubt De Clare) and of Warenne, of Hastings, and of England again, since the last pair was of red samite with golden leopards.

The concluding sections (xlvi.–xlviii.) of the list of ornaments describe certain rich suits of vestments given by various donors, but they call for no special remark.

A few words may be not out of place here on the subject of the colours of the various vestments named in the inventory. In the first five sections these work out as follows :

—	Chasubles.	Copes.	Profession- Copes.	Tunics and Dalmatics (pairs).
Red ... ..	21	29	23	8
Blue ... ..	6	6	4	1
Black ... ..	5	4	2	1
White ... ..	4	2	—	2
Green ... ..	4	2	7	1
Purple ... ..	3	—	—	2
Murrey ... ..	2	3	2	3
Yellow ... ..	2	6	—	1
Cloth of Gold ... ..	1	—	1	—
Baudekin ... ..	—	—	22	1
Not stated ... ..	2	10	6	1
Coloris de pounaz ... ..	—	—	—	1
Diversi coloris ... ..	—	—	—	1
	50	62	67	23

The preponderance of red is here very noticeable<sup>1</sup>; so also is the small proportion of white vestments. It is also curious that the four richest chasubles and copes and the richest pair of tunics were black; it is therefore doubtful if they were used merely like the fifth black chasuble, which was a "solemn" one pro defunctis. At Evesham the great black chasuble was worn at high mass on Christmas Day, and black was the colour for the third and chief Christmas mass in many churches beyond sea. The smaller black chasuble was worn at Evesham on the day of St. Egwin, the founder and patron of the monastery.<sup>2</sup> To the colours of the profession-copes no importance can be attached. Of the actual occasion of use only one other case is noted beside that already quoted, a pair of tunics for the feast of St. Michael diversi coloris, whatever that may mean. In so few cases are the colours of the apparels of the albes noted that the evidence they furnish is practically valueless. Thus of the twenty-three silk albes, one only is noted as having blue apparels, and out of one hundred and fifteen linen albes only fifty-seven, or just one-half, have the colour of the apparels given. Of these twenty-six were red, twelve blue, ten black, eight green, and one white.

Among the suits in the custody of the four subsacriste we find red for martyrs, green for confessors, black for the dead,<sup>3</sup> and special suits for feasts of relics and of virgins, but the colours of these last are not given. The only other instances in the inventory where the occasion of use is stated are a black cloth with white lions for Palm Sunday, and two cloths of green and yellow respectively for the high altar for feasts of confessors during Lent.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>3</sup> This use of these three colours, or their equivalents (such as yellow for green, and blue for black) is common to all medieval churches.

The numerous suits under the headings vestimenta give the following results as to colours :

Red ... ..	28	Precious ... ..	1
Blue ... ..	10	Yellow ... ..	—
Black ... ..	—	Tawny ... ..	1
White ... ..	13	Not stated ... ..	2
Green ... ..	12		—
Purple ... ..	2		71
Murrey... ..	2

Of these suits fourteen had chasubles that were doubled (duplicati) or lined with another colour, perhaps so as to be reversible. Thus seven red chasubles were doubled respectively with blue, black, white, green (2), purple, and yellow; two white chasubles with yellow and black; four green chasubles with red (3) and white; and a purple chasuble with red. These second colours have not been included in the above table, nor some few other cases of single vestments enumerated among the suits.

The second part of the inventory has a heading in Latin, which may be translated :

“Texts and Relics in Christchurch, Canterbury, on the Feast of the Purification of Blessed Mary in the year of our Lord 1315, Richard of Sharsted being then sacrist and John Spicer subsacrist, namely in the 31st year of Prior Henry.

All the texts and other things within written were delivered by indenture by brother J[ohn] Spicer to brothers R[ichard of] Dover then sacrist and W[illiam] of London, subsacrist, on the morrow of All Souls in the year of our Lord 1321, in the presence of Dan H[enry] the prior and Denis his chaplain.”

The list of texts (Textus), i.e. books of the Gospels with jewelled or metal covers, enumerates twenty-two, of which two were sine libro, and a third enclosed St. Thomas's psalter instead of a gospel-book. Seven were covered with gold, nine with silver-gilt, three with plain silver and three with copper-gilt. Putting aside the metal in which the gems were set, twelve were jewelled. The first on the list is "a great text covered with gold and adorned with gems, with the Majesty in the midst and four golden Evangelists in the four corners." This device occurs on seven texts, and that of the Majesty with other accompaniments, such as four angels, on five others. The Crucifix with St. Mary and St. John is also found on seven. In one case the device was a representation of the martyrdom of St. Thomas, but this was on a wooden text "without a book," i.e. the covers only, which were overlaid with silver-gilt. The text that enclosed St. Thomas's psalter was covered with silver-gilt set with gems round the edges, with an ivory figure of our Lord in Majesty holding a book, and carved figures of the four Evangelists. Two other texts were ornamented with ivory carvings. One of them is described as "a great text which is called Domus Dei covered with silver and adorned with gems, with the Crucifix and Mary and John of ivory, and a white cameo beneath the foot of the Crucifix, with the four Evangelists in the four corners."

Besides the texts, there are included in the list two great jewels, the one an oblong onyx set in silver-gilt and adorned with gems, with a sapphire and four pearls in the middle, the other an oblong piece of jasper mounted in silver-gilt without gems, the gift of Edmund, earl of Cornwall; also "a long ivory angel in wood covered with copper." The two mounted stones may have been super-altars, or perhaps paxes, but the use to which the angel was put is not clear.

The rest of the inventory is taken up with the list of relics, in which the cathedral church of Canterbury was exceptionally rich.

The acquisition of the greater relics of the church seems to have begun during the archiepiscopate of Plegmund, who "journeyed to Rome and bought the blessed martyr Blase with much money of gold and silver, and he brought him with him when he returned to Canterbury and placed him in Christ Church."<sup>1</sup> The place of deposit within the church is not indicated. During the primacy of Odo (941–958) the greater part of the relics of St. Wilfrid was said to have been removed by him from Ripon, where the bishop had been buried, and placed in the high altar of Christchurch, Canterbury, which the primate was then rebuilding.<sup>2</sup> It was in Odo's time, too, that the church acquired in a singular manner the bones of St. Audoen, archbishop of Rouen, which were placed in a "precious and decent coffer made for them after the fashion of those days, and most carefully wrapped in divers wrappings."<sup>3</sup> Odo and Dunstan, both of whom were afterwards enshrined as saints, were buried in the cathedral church in 958 and 988 respectively beneath raised tombs.<sup>4</sup> In 1006, on the translation of Ælphege from the see of Winchester to Canterbury, he brought with him the head of St. Swithun and deposited it with many other relics in a second altar that had been built in front of the high altar,<sup>5</sup> and dedicated in honour of our Lord Jesus Christ.<sup>6</sup> In a crypt beneath these altars was an altar in which was enclosed the head of St. Furse,<sup>6</sup> and in another and earlier crypt beneath the ancient high altar in the western apse of the church was an altar wherein was enclosed the head of the blessed virgin Austroberta.<sup>7</sup> When and by whom these heads were so placed is not recorded. In 1023 the bones of Ælphege himself, by command of king Cnut, were removed from St. Paul's, where the archbishop had been buried after his murder, and deposited in his own Plegmund seems to have twice visited Rome: once on his election in 891, and again in 908, according to Ethelwerd. cathedral church.<sup>1</sup> Besides the archbishop mentioned, sixteen others, from Cuthbert (ob. 758) to Eadsin (ob. 1050), were buried in the baptistry or church of St. John Baptist to the east of the Saxon church, and their remains were subsequently transferred to shrines or places of honour in the new church.

Of the arrangement of the relics in Lanfranc's church only a few scanty particulars have been preserved. The bones of the archbishops who had been buried in the old church were removed by Lanfranc during the rebuilding and temporarily placed in wooden coffins above the lower vault of the north transept of his church, whence they were afterwards moved to the neighbourhood of various altars.<sup>2</sup> Thus Fleogild<sup>3</sup> and a saintly virgin Siburgis (who had been buried in the old church by Dunstan) found resting places to the right and left of St. Michael's altar in the south transept, while Ceolnoth and Æthelm, and Wulfhelm and Æthelnoth were placed respectively behind and before the altar of St. Benedict in the north transept.<sup>4</sup> The relics of St. Blase were probably deposited at his altar in the upper apse of the north transept. As we are without information as to the precise arrangements of Lanfranc's quire, it is impossible to say what relics were placed there, or in the crypt below it. We are, however, expressly told that every care was taken of the relics of Wilfrid, Ælphege, and Dunstan,<sup>5</sup> and the 1315 inventory enumerates the others that have been mentioned in connexion with the Saxon church.

Gervase, Opera Historica (Rolls' Series 73), i. 10. When St. Michael's chapel was rebuilt in 1447 the relics of St. Fleogild were removed to the beam over the screen at the entrance of the chapel of the Holy Trinity ad Coronam.

<sup>4</sup> Gervase, ibid. i. 11. The relics of Ceolnoth, Æthelm, Wulfhelm and Æthelnoth were evidently disturbed when St. Benedict's chapel was rebuilt, circa 1450, and removed to the eastern part of the church, for in Warham's time (see list, post) Ceolnoth's relics rested beside Fleogild's on the beam at the entry of the Trinity chapel, and those of Æthelm and Wulfhelm were then on the beam before the altar of St. John Baptist and St. John Evangelist in the south quire transept.

In the time of Anselm, who succeeded Lanfranc in 1093, the eastern part of the church was rebuilt on a much larger scale by priors Ernulf (1096-1107) and Conrad (1107-1126) and dedicated in 1130. From the minute description of the new work given by Gervase<sup>1</sup> we are enabled to place many of the relics. The coffins of St. Dunstan and St. Ælphege were placed in shrines, or rather tombs, on either side of the high altar, while on the great beam above the altar were "seven chests, covered with gold and silver, and filled with the relics of divers saints." In the north quire transept were two apses containing altars. By the northern, that of St. Martin, were laid archbishops Wulfred and Living, and by the southern, which was St. Stephen's altar, Æthelheard and Cuthbert. In the opposite transept, the southern altar was that of St. Gregory, where Bregwin and Plegmund had been placed about 1121, in consequence of an attempt to steal Bregwin's bones; at the northern altar, that of St. John Evangelist, were deposited Æthelgar and Ælfric. In the chapel of the Holy Trinity, at the extreme east end of the church, lay the relics of Odo on the south, and Wilfrid on the north of the altar, and to the west of them the bodies of archbishops Lanfranc and (subsequently) Theobald respectively. In the chapel of SS. Peter and Paul, in the southern tower that flanked the apse, were placed the remains of Anselm. The chapel of St. Andrew, in the opposite tower, was the vestry, and although, as a matter of course, it contained an altar, no relics were specially deposited thereat. Besides these relics in the upper church there were others deposited at various altars in the crypt. Under the Trinity chapel were two altars: that on the north, of St. John Baptist, before which lay archbishop Eadsin; that on the south, of St. Augustine, before which lay archbishop Æthelred. On the east side of the central pillar that carried the vault, the body of St. Thomas was first laid after his murder in 1177. Archbishop Siric was also buried in the crypt, before the altar of St. Paulinus, which was below that of St. John Evangelist.

During the great fire that destroyed the quire and presbytery in 1174, the reliquary chests upon the beam over the high altar were cast down and broken, but their scattered contents were collected and preserved by the monks. The coffins of St. Ælphege and St. Dunstan were afterwards taken up from their tombs, and deposited for safety in similar receptacles at the altar of the Holy Cross in the nave, which was temporarily used as the quire altar, whence they were again translated to the new presbytery on the entry into the new quire on Easter Even, 1180.<sup>1</sup> The relics of queen Ediva, "who before the fire reposed under a gilded shrine nearly in the middle of the southern cross," but had been deposited under the same altar of the Holy Cross after the fire, were at the same time removed to the vestry; they were subsequently placed on the north side of St. Martin's altar, under the shrine of archbishop Living. During the operations in the summer of 1180 the Trinity chapel was taken down, and the bones of Odo and Wilfrid temporarily placed beneath the shrines of Dunstan and Ælphege. Lanfranc's lead coffin was removed to the vestry, but it was afterwards opened and the decayed contents transferred into a smaller leaden coffer, which was then deposited at the altar of St. Martin. Theobald's body was lifted entire, in a mummified state, from his stone coffin, and also removed to the vestry, but later on was buried in a lead coffin before the altar of the Blessed Virgin Mary in the north aisle of the nave, where it was discovered in 1787.<sup>2</sup> The two archbishops, Eadsin and Æthelred, who lay to the right and left of St. Thomas's coffin in the crypt beneath the Trinity chapel, were taken up in their leaden coffins and buried beneath the altar of St. Mary, also in the crypt, where they probably still remain ; they were certainly there in Warham's days. The coffin of St. Thomas was suffered to remain until the body could be translated to the new shrine in preparation for it, and meanwhile it was covered by a wooden chapel. The translation of the saint took place in 1220, when his body was finally deposited in the great shrine behind the high altar.

It will be seen from the foregoing remarks that the relics of Christchurch, Canterbury, may be divided into four classes :

1. The greater relics, of saints and archbishops, canonized at Rome or in popular estimation, which were placed in standing shrines or tombs ;
2. The lesser relics, of saints and archbishops, contained in portable or moveable shrines ;
3. The relics of former archbishops and pious lay-folk, buried or placed near altars ;
4. Miscellaneous objects enclosed in reliquaries ; to which may be added,

5. The tombs of certain archbishops, who were objects of popular veneration or pilgrimage.

Of the greater and lesser relics the list under notice enumerates twelve, each consisting of the body (corpus) of a saint, the position of which is also stated. That of St. Thomas the martyr "in his shrine" heads the list, and is followed by those of St. Ælphege and St. Dunstan, each in his shrine on either side of the high altar, that of St. Ælphege being on the north, that of St. Dunstan on the south. The body of St. Odo lay in a shrine ad Coronam towards the south, and that of St. Wilfrid opposite to it on the north. These two shrines, or tombs, as they more probably were, stood on either side of the altar of the Holy Trinity, in the round chapel at the extreme end of the church, where the great relic called the Corona, or Crown of St. Thomas, was kept. The site of St. Wilfrid's shrine is still marked by a step beneath the window, with sunk quatrefoils on the face. St. Odo's shrine stood on a similar but plain step, which is also in place. The body of St. Anselm, that next on the list, is described as "in a shrine at the altar of St. Peter." This altar was actually dedicated in honour of St. Peter and St. Paul, and the archbishop's feretrum was probably a raised tomb beside or in front of it, but no traces of it are left. The remaining six "bodies" were lesser relics, consisting of mere boxes of bones deposited in convenient places. That of St. Ælfric lay where it had been deposited nearly two centuries before, at the altar of St. John Evangelist in the south quire transept. The shrine of St. Blase, perhaps because it was the oldest of the relics, occupied a place of honour "behind the high altar." It was apparently on a beam over it, for the account of Winchelsey's enthronization in 1294 states that during the ceremony the archbishop, the prior, and the ministers of the altar "made a station behind the high altar under the shrine of St. Blase, before the marble chair, turned towards the east," and again that "eight monks alternately sang the song Benedictus under the shrine of St. Blase before the archbishop sitting in his chair."<sup>1</sup> The body of St. Audoen was probably deposited in the new church at first at the altar dedicated in his honour in the crypt, but in the list under notice it is described as "in a new shrine in the great almary of the relics"; the place of this will be indicated presently. How and when the church acquired the relics of St. Salvius and St. Wulgan is not recorded. The "body" of the former was "in the first shrine upon the beam beyond the high altar," where also were placed three other feretra (see below), as well as a great ivory horn full of relics that hung under the beam. The position of this beam is at first sight uncertain, but there can be little doubt that it crossed the church a little above, and so was "beyond," the high altar. Such a beam existed in the same position in Conrad's presbytery, and is thus described by Gervase: "At the eastern horns of the altar were two wooden columns, decently ornamented with gold and silver, that sustained a great beam, the ends of which beam rested upon the capitals of two of the pillars. This beam, carried across the church above the altar, and decorated with gold, sustained a majesty of our Lord, an image of St. Dunstan and of St. Ælfege, together with seven shrines covered with gold and silver and filled with the relics of many saints."<sup>1</sup> The position of similar beams is indicated by the description of the place of St. Wulgan's body, "in a chest upon the beam beyond the altar of St. Stephen," and of St. Swithun's body,<sup>2</sup> "in a chest upon the beam beyond the altar of St. Martin." These altars stood in the existing small apses in the north quire transept, and the relics in question rested upon beams or perches above the altars, where the hooks that sustained them remain.

Throughout the enumeration of the greater and lesser relics it is curious that nothing further is recorded concerning any one of the twelve, than its position in the church. Reference will be made later to certain remarkable omissions in the list.

Of relics of the third class, those of archbishops and layfolk buried or placed near altars, no mention is made in the inventory, probably because they were in fixed tombs or not visible. Their respective places have already been fully noted.

Of relics of the fourth class, miscellaneous objects enclosed in reliquaries, the inventory enumerates a very considerable number. First in order are three heads, of St. Blase, St. Furse, and St. Austroberta, each enclosed in silver-gilt. Next come eleven arms of saints, each encased in an arm-shaped reliquary of silver-gilt. Then follow fifty-six separate reliquaries of various kinds and shapes, containing every conceivable class of relic. Seven of them were in the form of crosses, of which four were double-barred as containing particles of the True Cross, a fifth was a St. Andrew's cross because it contained relics of that saint, and a sixth was "a cross of St. Peter with reversed image" enclosing some of St. Peter's cross; the other cross was a gold one full of relics, given by Stephen Langton. In a crystal tube was a thorn of Our Lord's crown. All these relics are described as "in the great almary of relics beside the high altar." From the fact that the remaining reliquaries are described as "also contained in the same great almary," it is probable that the cupboard was a double one, and that the first mentioned relics were kept in one half, and the rest in the other.

Before discussing the position of the relic cupboard a few words may be said as to the second group of its contents. The list of these begins with four single items, namely, Aaron's rod, a "table" (probably a slab) from the tomb of Blessed Mary, and the superaltar and a chalice made of crystal, gold, and enamel, with a paten de perle, that once belonged to St. Ælphege. Next come nineteen filacteria, or reliquaries that could be hung up by cords, made of crystal, copper, silver or silver-gilt, and containing various relics of saints, such as teeth, bits of bone, fragments of garments, etc. In two of them were relics of St. Thomas. The next on the list are a small silver-gilt cup containing St. Thomas's pall, and a round glass in which was some of the dust of his body. Among the seven following items is an oblong crystalline stone set in silver-gilt under which was some of the saint's flesh and skin. But a much more important lot of relics was preserved in the next reliquary, a great ivory coffer guarded by a lock. This contained the simple white mitre in which St. Thomas had been buried, another white mitre he was wont to use on simple feasts, his gloves, his sandals, of blue embroidered with gold roses, besants and crescents, his buskins of black samite, his famous hairshirt, and some of his bed and girdle. Two packets of other relics of him, wrapped in white silk, were likewise enclosed in the coffer. The next three items in the list were standing "tables" of silver-gilt, containing various relics. The remaining reliquaries, chiefly ivory and copper boxes or caskets, need only be mentioned on account of the miscellaneous curiosities preserved in some of them, such as

Some of the stone upon which the Lord stood when he ascended into Heaven.

Some of the Lord's table upon which he made the Supper.

Some of the oil of St. Mary of Sardiney, which flowed from the breast and nipples of a certain image of the blessed Virgin Mary.

Some of the prison whence the Angel of the Lord snatched the blessed apostle Peter.

Some wool which St. Mary the Virgin had woven.

Some of the oak upon which Abraham [sic] climbed to see the Lord ; and

Some of the clay out of which God fashioned Adam.

Last in the list come the canola, perhaps the silver Eucharistic reed, of St. Blase, which was kept near his shrine in an almary behind the high altar ; three shrines filled with divers relics that stood on the beam beyond the high altar, and a great ivory horn, also full of relics, that hung beneath it ; and certain relics contained "in a wooden desk at the altar of the Holy Cross in the nave of the church, partly covered with silver-gilt, with gems, and a cross in the midst."

Two most notable relics that were certainly in the church when the inventory was made are not included in it, viz. the Crown of St. Thomas and the Sword Point. The former of these was a mitred bust which had only lately been enriched with gold and silver and precious stones at a cost of £115 12s. (or about £3000 at present value) at the expense of prior Henry of Eastry,<sup>1</sup> and contained the reputed crown of St. Thomas's head said to have been severed at his martyrdom. It was kept in a special relic cupboard guarded by iron grates, on the south side of the altar of the Holy Trinity, in the round chapel at the extreme east end of the church. The Sword Point was preserved in the "martyrdom," or north transept, and is described in an inventory of the custos martirii made in 1503,<sup>2</sup> as

Item in capsula lignea cuspidis gladii fixus in capite sancti
Thome martiris cerebro et sanguine cruentata.

The omission of these relics from the inventory may be on account of each being in charge of a special custos or keeper, but then the shrine of St. Thomas had two feretrars or guardians and yet is included in the list of relics. Or the omission is merely accidental.

The great almetry or relic cupboard to which reference has several times been made must have been of considerable size. It stood juxta magnum altare, as described in the inventory, on a raised platform, shown in Hollar's plan,<sup>3</sup> between the tombs of archbishops Chichele and Bouchier, where archbishop Howley's cenotaph now is. The site is absolutely fixed by the agreement for Chichele's burial "on the north part of our quire, between the place of the Relics, and the entry of the quire from the vestibule to the high altar."<sup>4</sup>

As no later list of the relics has been preserved, it will be interesting to compare with the foregoing remarks the positions occupied by the relics of the archbishops at the beginning of the sixteenth century, from a manuscript written during Warham's archiepiscopate and now preserved among the Parker MSS. in the library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge :<sup>1</sup>

Cuthbert : "modo jacet in eadem ecclesia Cantuariensi in altari sancti Stephani ex boriali parte chori."

It may also be interesting to quote the evidence of Erasmus as to the places where the ornaments and jewels were kept.<sup>1</sup>

The first place visited by "Ogygius" was the Martyrdom or north transept, where he was shown a wooden altar dedicated to the Blessed Virgin (altare ligneum divæ Virgini sacrum). "On the altar," he says, "is the point of the sword (cuspidis gladii) with which the head of the most excellent prelate was cleft," etc. He then visited the crypt, where he says he was shown "the perforated skull of the martyr; the other parts are covered with silver, the highest part of the skull being bare is open for a kiss." No other record, however, of such a relic in this place is known. From the crypt "Ogygius" was conducted into the quire, where "on the north side the almeries were unlocked. It is wonderful to tell," he says, "how many bones were brought out thence, skulls, jaw-bones, teeth, hands, fingers, and whole arms." This is a most concise summary of the contents as set forth in the inventory. The visitors next viewed the golden tabula and other ornaments of the high altar, and then the things that were kept under the altar (sub

It is clear from this account that the vaulted chamber under the steps which led to the archbishop's throne was the place where the principal jewels and ornaments were kept. This chamber is entered from the north aisle of the presbytery, immediately opposite the vestry. It retains its ancient floor of encaustic tiles and has two grated windows on the east looking into the crypt, but none of the old fittings remains. From this treasury "Ogygius" and his friends were led into the vestry. "Good God! what pomp was there of silk vestments! What wealth of golden candlesticks! In the same place we saw the staff (pedum) of the blessed Thomas. It seemed to be a cane covered with silver plates; it was of little weight, no workmanship, nor any higher than to the girdle." "Ogygius" says he saw no cross. He was also shown the pallium, which he asserts was all of silk, though of coarse thread and unornamented with gold or gems<sup>1</sup>; also a handkerchief retaining manifest traces of sweat wiped from the neck and of blood. The pall of St. Thomas, it will be remembered, is included among the relics in the inventory, but there is no mention of the handkerchief (sudarium). From the vestry "Ogygius" was conducted to the "upper parts" or chapel of St. Thomas. Here he first saw "in a certain little chapel," the circular chapel of the Holy Trinity, the great relic called the Corona, which he describes as "the whole face of the most holy man, gilt and ornamented with many gems." Its custodian he calls assessor capitis aurei. There can be no doubt, therefore, that the object seen was a mitred bust of St. Thomas, which enclosed what at Canterbury was always called corona, i.e. St. Thomas's crown, but was known to the world at large, from its shape, as the caput sancti Thome, or St. Thomas's head. Finally, after viewing the shrine of St. Thomas, the visitors before leaving the church paid a second visit to the vestry to see some other relics of the saint.

Besides the relics proper, there were certain archbishops whose saintly lives caused their tombs to be regarded as places of popular veneration or pilgrimage. The chief of these was archbishop Robert of Winchelsey, who died in 1313. For twenty years after his death offerings were made at his tomb of the average yearly value of £37, the amounts entered in the treasurers' accounts ranging as high as £90 in 1319-20. In the next year they reached £60. In five other years they reached £50. In 1329-30 the offerings for the first time fell below £20, and forty years later they sank to a few pence and finally to nothing. The archbishop's tomb stood against the south wall of the south quire transept, but it has long been destroyed; it is believed, on account of its still being an object of popular resort.

In the Obituarium or Kalendar of Obits of Christchurch, Canterbury, now preserved in the Lambeth Palace Library,<sup>1</sup> are many notices of gifts of vestments and other ornaments which have entitled the donors to be reckoned among the benefactors of the church. A number of these gifts may be identified with jewels or ornaments described in the inventory, and have therefore, as far as practicable, been noticed in connexion with them. But there are two important lists of gifts none of which can positively be identified or appears to be specified in the inventory. The first list enumerates the vestments and ornaments given by Conrad, who was prior from 1107 to 1126, and is as follows:

Cancellum quippe ecclesie quem venerabilis Ernulphus antecessor ejus imperfectum reliquerat. ipse sua industria magnifice consummavit. Consummatumque egregia pictura decoravit. Decoratum vero preciosis ornamentis locupletavit. Inter alia siquidem ista ecclesie sue dedit schillas duo ex melioribus. tapetum peroptimum. pallia <sup>iii</sup><sup>or</sup> ex majoribus et melioribus tocus ecclesie. pallium quoque unum bonum de mediocribus tamen. Candelabrum mire magnitudinis de auricalco fabricatum. habens tres hinc. et tres inde ramos ex medio proprio prodeuntes stipite. unde septem recepit cereos. . . . . Cappam preciosissimam undique exterius auro purissimo intextam. inferius et per circuitum centum et quadraginta nolas argenteas sed deauratas habentem. nonnullis lapidibus preciosissimis interpositis fieri fecit. pro cujus expensione centum libras distribuit.<sup>1</sup>

The other list contains the gifts of prior Wibert (1153-1167):

Hic inter multa bona opera que fecit. isti ecclesie contulit ornamenta Scillam unam Man[t]jellum unum. Signum quoque magnum in clocario posuit. quod triginti duo homines ad sonandum trahunt. Duo magna tapeta. Pallium magnum de melioribus ecclesie. Curtinam magnam depictam fecit. Duas cappas. et duas casulas de pallio. Quinque albas de serico. et sextam lineam pallio paravit de auro. Amictus duos. et stolas totidem de auro. Calicem magnum et duo turribula argentea. quidem sed deaurata. textum unum undique argenteum deauratum et ornatum. . . . . Ad cappam faciendam quam facere proposuerat ducentos aureos. et viginti libras reliquid [sic].<sup>2</sup>

Most of these gifts are of the same character as others specified in the inventory, but there are two of Conrad's benefactions that deserve especial notice, namely the great seven-branched candlestick, and the precious cope with its bordering of one hundred and forty little silver-gilt bells. These ornaments, together with the rationale, the amice and superhumurale, the tunicle of blue, the albe, the mitre, and the girdle, and perhaps the morrow mass altar, with the Lenten veil and the white ornaments used in Lent, are probably, as it has been pointed out in the Introduction, relics of the curious imitation of the vestments and ornaments of the Jewish ritual that came into fashion in the eleventh century. The vestments imitated are those of the high priest, which were first worn by Aaron; in the Christian Church, therefore, their use was in the beginning restricted to bishops. Of most of them it is unnecessary to speak, as their character and history are well known. The ornament known as the rationale, which was obviously copied from Aaron's breastplate, is to be seen on many monuments and seals of bishops of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries in the form of a brooch or plate of various forms and usually jewelled, but it seems to have gone out of use before the beginning of the fourteenth century. The Aaronic ephod appears to have been represented among the episcopal ornaments by the amice and the superhumurale. There is no positive evidence that the latter, in its Aaronic form, was ever worn in England, but some few bishops abroad<sup>1</sup> had such an ornament, in the form of two golden ouches or roundels resting on the shoulders and joined across the breast and back by an embroidered band, which was usually, if not always, fringed. In this country it was perhaps represented by the golden embroidery seen round the opening of the neck on the chasuble said to have belonged to St. Thomas of Canterbury, now preserved at Sens, and by the like ornament shown on the monumental effigies of bishop Roger (1107-1139) at Salisbury, and bishops Henry Marshall (1194-1206), Simon of Apulia (1214-1223), and Walter of Bronscombe (1258-9-1280) at Exeter, and on the seals of Robert Bloett, bishop of Lincoln (1093-1122-3), and of Ralph

Flambard, bishop of Durham (1099-1128). It is possible that this same ornament is identical with the tasselli already mentioned as found on copes, chasubles, and tunicles.<sup>1</sup> The golden bells sewn round Aaron's "robe of the ephod" do not appear to have been hung round the tunicle of blue which represented that garment; at any rate no instances seem to have been noticed in this country. The little bells were however used, but round the bottom edge of the cope instead, as in Conrad's gift already noticed, and the two gorgeous copes, formerly Lanfranc's, that are described in the inventory. The cope has of course an origin quite distinct from the Aaronic vestments, but the bells were doubtless suspended round it as being, like the blue tunicle, a vestment worn over all the rest. How strongly the Judaizing influence prevailed at Canterbury is seen in the fact that among the gifts of Ernulf, who was formerly prior there, to his cathedral church of Rochester, was "capam principalem cum skillis argenteis."<sup>2</sup> Besides this cope with its fringe of little silver bells, he also gave divers other vestments, among which was tunicam epistolariam violaciam, which is possibly the "tunicle of blue." A blue tunicle powdered with gold birds is shown on the beautiful painted effigy at Exeter of bishop Walter of Bronscombe (1258-9-1280), notwithstanding that his chasuble is white.<sup>3</sup> Some few instances have been noticed of the attachment of bells to vestments other than copes. Thus in the inventory of the cathedral church of St. Paul, London, made in 1245, we find that the stole and fanon of a vestment formerly dean Alard's (c. 1204-1215) were ornamented "cum majestate, [et] ymagine in extremitatibus angeli cum campanellis argenteis,"<sup>4</sup> and the inventory of 1295 mentions: "Una Mitra breudata cum stellis, etc. . . . in altero pendulorum deficiunt tres catenulæ, cum Karolis argenteis appensis; et dedit hanc mitram Fulco Bassett;"<sup>5</sup> also:

It is worth noting that Sicard, bishop of Cremona, the author of the Mitræ sive de officiis ecclesiasticis Summa, who died in 1215, says of the humærale "quod dicebatur ephod, in quo erant duo lapides xii. patriarcharum nomina continentes, et apud nos vocatur amictus."<sup>3</sup> Not improbably it was on this theory that the amice-apparels were often jewelled, as in the inventory under notice. The amice-apparel at Sens called St. Thomas's has pearls at intervals, and as previously pointed out, that found in archbishop Hubert's coffin had on it imitation turquoises of stained bone or ivory.

A great candlestick with seven branches appears to have been a not uncommon ornament in such of the great cathedral and monastic churches as could afford it, or were the fortunate recipients of one from some wealthy donor, and fine examples are still preserved in several churches abroad.<sup>4</sup> Not one has survived in this country the spoliations of the sixteenth century, but of their former existence we have ample proof. The earliest recorded example appears to be that at Winchester, to which church king Cnut gave in 1035 "magnum candelabrum argenteum cum vi. brachiis, qualia modo in

<sup>4</sup> One at Essen, 2 m. 10 cm. high, is engraved in Didron's Revue Archéologique, xi. 294, and described in xviii. 322 of the same work. It is of the 12th century, if it be not earlier, and is obviously copied from the seven-branched candlestick from the Temple at Jerusalem as figured on the Arch of Titus at Rome. A very fine example of the beginning of the 13th century is preserved at Milan, and a cast of it may be seen in the South Kensington Museum. It is 4 m. 50 cm. high, and closely answers to the description of that formerly at Durham. A much finer candlestick of the same type existed at St. Remi at Rheims until the Revolution, and only part of the foot has been preserved. A like one formerly at Bourges was broken up by the Huguenots in 1562 (Revue Archéologique, ix. 90). There was once another in the cathedral church of Rouen described in an inventory made between 1184 and 1192 as: "Unum magnum candelabrum de cupro deauratum cum vij branchis" (Revue de l'art chrétien, 3<sup>e</sup> série, iv. 461).

Ecclesiis videmus pretiosissima de aurichalco."<sup>1</sup> Another was acquired by St. Augustine's abbey at Canterbury in the time of abbot Hugh de Flori, 1091-1124, who "Candelabrum eciam magnum in choro æreum quod Jesse vocatur in partibus emit transmarinis."<sup>2</sup> A third, evidently of similar pattern, which was gilt circa 1200, belonged to the abbey of St. Edmund at Bury. It stood in the quire, and had in front of it a tabula or painting representing the Last Judgment, etc. From the record of certain inscriptions on it, we know that the candlestick included among its ornaments the Creation of Adam and Eve and the Fall.<sup>3</sup> Of a fourth example, that at Durham, where it seems in later times to have served as the Paschal candlestick, a quaint description is given in Rites:

Also there was a goodly monument pertaing to the Church called the PASCALL, which was wont to be set upp in the Quire, and there to remain, from the Thursday called Maundy thursday, before Easter, untill Wednesday after the Assention day, that did stand uppon a foure-square thick planke of wood against the first grees or stepp, hard behind the three basons of silver that hung before the High Altar. In the midst of the said greese is a nick wherein one of the corners of the said planke was placed, and at every corner of the planke was an iron ringe, wherunto the feete of the Pascall were adjoyned, representinge the pictures of foure flyinge dragons as also the pictures of the four Evangelists above the tops of the dragons, underneath the nethermost bosse, all supportinge the whole pascall; and [in] the four quarters have beene foure christall stones, and in the four small dragons' four heads four christall stones, as by the holes doth appeare. And on everye side of the fourdragons there is curious antick worke, as beasts and men, MS. Domitian A. xiii. The MSS. have for "magnum" "magni et," which does not make sense with the context, and the word should clearly be "magnum." The number of the branches has probably also been blundered by the scribes.

uppon horsbacks, with bucklers, bowes and shafts, and knotts, with broad leaves spred uppon the knotts, very finely wrought, all beinge of most fine and curious candlestick mettall [or Latten mettall glistering as the gold it self, having six candlesticks or flowers of candlestick mettall] comminge from it, three of everye side, wheron did stand in everye of the said flowers or candlestick a taper of wax. And on the height of the said candlestick or Pascall of lattine was a faire large flower, beinge the principall flower; which was the seventh candlestick. The Pascall in latitude did containe almost the bredth of the Quire, in longitude that did extend to the height of the vault, wherein did stand a long peece of wood reachinge within a man's length to the uppermost vault rooffe of the church, wheron stood a great long square taper of wax called the Pascall, a fine conveyance through the rooffe of the church to light the taper with all. In conclusion this Pascall was estimated to bee one of the rarest monuments in England.<sup>1</sup>

It is unfortunately not recorded how or when the Durham candlestick was obtained. Other examples existed at Lincoln, York, Salisbury, Westminster, and Hereford, but no descriptions or other notices of them have survived, other than in the directions for their use on great feasts. They seem in every case, at any rate in early times, to have stood in the presbytery before the high altar, and parallel with it, so as to "containe," as at Durham, "almost the bredth of the Quire."

The custom at Durham of using the seven-branched candlestick for the paschal was exceptional, and probably of comparatively late date when the significance of the candlestick had been forgotten. It is unfortunate that we have no other record of the Christchurch candlestick than its gift by Conrad, and we are equally ignorant of its fate. It is quite possible that owing to its size it could not be removed from the church during the great fire of 1174, and so perished in the conflagration. There is no later mention of it.

There is yet a third list of benefactions which ought not to be passed over, that containing the numerous gifts made to his cathedral church by archbishop Hubert (1193-1205), and thus recorded by Gervase :

Dedit etiam idem archiepiscopus ecclesiæ Christi subscripta ornamenta : Ecclesiam scilicet de Halesgesto concessit et confirmavit præcentori ad emendandos ecclesiæ libros. Præterea dedit eidem Cantuariensi ecclesiæ pallia duo auro texta, casulas iii., cappas iii., dalmaticas iij., tunicas iii., albas iii., stolas cum manipulis, amictus ii., calicem aureum, ampullas ii. cristallinas, altare gestatorium de lapide calcedonio, crucem cum ligno Domini, zonam et pecten eburneum, mitras vi., chirothecarum paria iii. omnia gemmis et auro parata decenter; præterea mitras et chirothecas sine auro, candelabra, et ampullas, et acerram de argento, baccilia de argento et deaurata; pannos ii. de serico auro paratas, spindulas iii. de auro, mappulam de serico, cultellum de jaspide et alium de ceraste. vas cristallinum cum balsamo; cuppam auream et aliam argenteam et deauratam; justas iii. argenteas ad crisma; anulos aureos iiii. cum lapidibus pretiosis, tapetum bonum; bibulum veteris et novi Testamenti; psalterium glossatum; cosinos quatuor; culcitram i., equos iii., capellam quoque egregiam, quam in testamento suo vocavit principalem, ecclesiæ dedit; sic tamen ut conventus pro anima sua expendendas daret ccc. marcas. Hanc rex Johannes ecclesiæ subtraxit.<sup>1</sup>

Only two chasubles and as many copes are specially ascribed in the inventory to archbishop Hubert, but no doubt other of his gifts are included therein. The ornaments themselves call for no special remark.

The following is the full and corrected text of the inventory :

<sup>1</sup> Gervase says that St. Thomas was buried in a marble tomb in the crypt the day after his murder "et ut verum fatear, quod oculis meis vidi et manibus attractavi, habet ad carnem cilicium, deinde staminium, desuper cucullam nigram, deinde albam in qua sacratus est; tunicam quoque et dalmaticam, casulam, pallium, et mitram. Inferius vero, femoralia habet cilicina, desuper linea, caligas laneas, et sandalia" Gervase, Acta Pontificum (Rolls' Series 73), ii. 396. These vestments were probably taken out of the coffin when the saint's remains were translated to the new shrine in 1220. The pall and mitre seem to have been kept entire as relics, while portions of the others will be found among the contents of the various reliquaries.

III.—OTHER ORNAMENTS AND JEWELS ACQUIRED DURING THE FOUR- TEENTH CENTURY.

AFTER the great inventory of 1315-16 no early list of additions to the ornaments of the church has come down to us, with the exception of one to be noticed in the next section, of ornaments and jewels acquired or repaired in the time of prior Chillenden, 1390-1 to 1411. There are nevertheless several benefactions of importance which deserve notice.

First in point of date are certain gifts made by archbishop Simon of Islip (1349-1366) by deed dated January 7th, 1361-2,<sup>1</sup> of which the following were for the use of his cathedral church :

Vestimentum nostrum novum auro contextum de quatuor garniamentis videlicet casula capa dalmatica et tunica.

Item unam albam cum amictu et paruris aureis novis et melioribus quas habemus.

Item unam aliam capam meliorem et preciosorem quam habemus.

Item duas pulcras tabulas argenteas et bene deauratas.

Item unum jocale aureum pulcrum in quo reponitur sacra eucaristia.

The two silver-gilt tables are again referred to in the archbishop's will, which is quoted in the Kalendar of Obits, whence we learn that they were bequeathed to the high altar, and had been bought by the archbishop from the executors of Dan Robert of Chigwell :

Item lego majori altari ecclesie mee duas pulcras tabulas argenteas et bene deauratas. quas emi de executoribus domini Roberti de Chykewell.<sup>2</sup>

William of Edington, bishop of Winchester, 1346-1366, is credited in the Kalendar of Obits with the following gifts to Christchurch, Canterbury :

Item dedit prefate ecclesie quinque cappas unam casulam et tres tunicas rubeas cum appendicijs et pertinencijs suis.<sup>1</sup>

In 1376, Edward, prince of Wales, the eldest son of Edward III. (now commonly known as the "Black Prince"), bequeathed a number of valuable ornaments to the cathedral church wherein he was buried. To the high altar he left : a vestment (i.e. suit) of green velvet embroidered with gold, with all that belonged to it ; two basons of gold ; a chalice of gold with his arms on the foot, and the paten thereto ; two cruets of gold ; an image of the Holy Trinity "to put upon the said altar" ; and his best cross, of silver-gilt and enamelled. To the altar of Our Lady of the Undercroft, in the crypt, before which he desired to be buried, he left : a whole white suit diapered with a blue vine ; a frontal which had been given him by the bishop of Exeter, having the Assumption of Our Lady in the midst and other imagery ; and a tabernacle of the same subject, the gift of the said bishop ; also two great twisted silver candlesticks, two basons with his arms, a great gilt and enamelled chalice with the arms of Warrenne, and two cruets wrought in the form of angels. He further bequeathed to the church his salle or "halling," consisting of a dosser, eight pieces for costers, and two bankers<sup>2</sup> of ostrich feathers of black tapestry,<sup>3</sup> with a red border with swans with ladies'

<sup>2</sup> A "hall" or "halling" was a set of hangings, often of tapestry, where-with to cover the lower parts of the walls of a hall or great chamber. The hanging behind the dais at the upper end was called a dosser ; those at the sides were the costers ; and those that covered the benches or principal seats were called bankers.

<sup>3</sup> As is well known the prince's shield "for peace" was sable, three ostrich feathers argent. Beautiful enamelled escutcheons bearing these arms are placed on his tomb. It is perhaps hardly necessary to add that the ostrich feathers are not derived from John, king of Bohemia, but from the prince's mother, queen Philippa of Hainault, whose badge they were. See Archæologia, xxxi. 355.

heads. Of these, the dosser was to be cut up, and as much as was needed was to make an upper and a nether frontal for the high altar. The rest of it and the two bankers were to be converted into (1) frontals for : (a) the altar "where my lord St. Thomas lies," that at the head of his shrine ; (b) the altar "where the head is," that in the round chapel of the Holy Trinity where the corona or caput sancti Thomæ was kept and exhibited ; (c) the altar "where the sword-point is," in the north transept ; and (2), if there was enough, into hangings round his tomb, which was directed to be immediately before the altar of Our Lady of the Undercroft. The eight costers were to be hung in the quire above the length of the stalls, in memory of the prince, on the feast of the Trinity and all principal feasts, on the feasts and day of St. Thomas, on all the feasts of Our Lady, and on the anniversary of the prince's death.<sup>1</sup>

He also gave to the altar of "Our Lady Undercroft," at which he had founded a chantry of two chaplains, his massbook and his porthos, which he had caused to be illuminated in divers places with his arms and "nos bages dez plumes dostruce" ; also two "single vestments," that is a set for a priest only, consisting of albe, amice, chasuble, stole, and fanon, "with decent towels to each of the said vestments."

The prince's gifts are thus summarized in the Kalendar of Obits :

Legavit summo altari ejusdem ecclesie. unum viride vestimentum de auro brudatum integrum de velveto. Item unum calicem cum patena de auro cum armis suis. Item duos urceolos aureos. Item unam ymaginem argenteam et deauratam de sancta Trinitate. Item aulam suam de pennis de ostrech. et tapestria nigra. et rubia bordura cum signis. capita dominarum habente [sic].<sup>2</sup>

The following text of the bequests, as given in the prince's will, dated June 7th, 1376, has been carefully collated with the only known copy of it in archbishop Simon of Sudbury's register :<sup>1</sup>

By deed dated 22nd February (Cathedra sancti Petri), 1395, the lady Joan de Mohun, lady of Dunster, made a solemn agreement with Thomas the prior, and the convent of Christchurch, Canterbury, for the proper keeping of her obit, and that she should be buried "in tumba quam dicta domina sumptibus suis et expensis construi fecerat prope altare beate Marie dicte ecclesie Cant. in Criptis que under croft vulgariter nuncupatur. Et quod corpus dicte domine Johanne. a dicta tumba cum ibidem humatum fuerit. non amovebitur.<sup>1</sup> nec nomen illius tumbe mutabitur. sed honorifice custodietur." These conditions were agreed to in consideration of the sum of 350 marks sterling, to be paid by the lady Joan to the prior and convent.

His will strictly enjoins that he be buried immediately in front of the altar beside which lady Joan de Mohun's tomb still stands, yet his tomb is now to the south of the site of the shrine in the chapel of St. Thomas.

IV.—ORNAMENTS AND JEWELS ACQUIRED OR REPAIRED IN THE TIME OF THOMAS CHILLENDEN, PRIOR, 1390-1 TO 1411.

ONE of the greatest benefactors to the monastery of Christchurch, Canterbury, was Thomas Chillenden, who held the office of prior from the 16th February, 1390-1, to the 15th August, 1411. During his priorate not only were considerable additions made to the ornaments and jewels, but the nave of the church was rebuilt and many of the monastic buildings enlarged and reconstructed. Chillenden's works are thus summarized in the Kalendar of Obits:<sup>1</sup>

[A list follows of the works carried out by Chillenden in the curia or outer court, and elsewhere.]

Among the compotus rolls of this prior that have been preserved is that covering his last year of office from Michaelmas 1410 to Michaelmas 1411. It ends with the single word "Verte," and on the reverse is entered a long list of all the good works carried out by Chillenden during his priorate, either by himself or by his assistance or direction. The list is divided into two main heads of (1) the ornaments and jewels of the church that were acquired or mended while Chillenden was prior, and (2) of the new works and repairs carried out

<sup>1</sup> Pope Alexander III. (1159-1181) by an undated bull grants to A. the prior [Alan, 1179-1186-7] and the chapter of Canterbury the privilege of wearing the tunic and dalmatic at mass on the feasts of St. Gregory, St. Benedict, the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, St. Andrew, if within Advent, and on the feast of St. Elphege, if it fall in Lent. By bull of pope Innocent III. dated x kal. Maii. anno pontif. 8° (22nd April 1206), the prior received the privilege, at the prayer of the archbishop, "utendi cirothecis et dalmatica necnon mantello in mensa." Honorius III. by bull dated vii. id. Jan. anno pontif. 5° (17th January 1220-1) grants to the prior and convent that the prior and his successors may have "usum mitre in precipuis sollempnitatibus sinodis processionibus et ecclesie vestre festivitibus auctoritate presencium pro ipsius preciosi martiris [i.e. St. Thomas] reverencia." By a later bull in the same year, dated ii. id. Maii, anno pontif. 5°. the pope grants the prior the privilege of using the ring. By bull dated iij. id. Dec. anno pontif. 1° (11th December 1378) pope Urban VI. granted to the prior, in addition to the mitre, tunic, dalmatic, gloves and ring, the privilege of using the crozier and sandals, and of giving the blessing after mass and in other divine offices, and at table. This bull is headed: "De baculo pastorali per Thomam Chyllyndene || Ista bulla fuit impetrata et concessa a domino Urbano [papa] vjto. anno Domini Millesimo CCC<sup>mo</sup>. lxxvij°. et tempore Regis Ricardi secundi anno ij° expensis Prioris et Capituli ecclesie Christi Cantuariensis tempore domini Simonis de Sudbury Archiepiscopi Cantuariensis et legum doctoris ac venerabilis fratris domini Johannis Vynch de Wynchelse Prioris dicte ecclesie et fratris Thome Chillyngdene monachi dicte ecclesie et bacalarij in decretis procuratoris dicte ecclesie Cantuariensis in Romana curia tunc existente." The respective bulls are entered in Register A. f. xxvj.

during the same period on the church and monastic buildings.<sup>1</sup>

With the exception of a few entries touching the furniture of the church, the second of these sections does not concern us, but the list of jewels and ornaments has a special interest, since no general inventories of the fifteenth century have come down to us. It is, therefore, only from such accidental records as that entered on the prior's compotus roll, and occasional items in the accounts and obituary notices, that we can learn how, when, and what additions were made to the ornaments and jewels of the church.

The first sub-section of the list under notice enumerates the various vestments and altar hangings acquired during Chillenden's priorate. Besides single copes and chasubles and suits, several large groups are included, such as a set of thirty-nine white copes of cloth of gold, a red suit with twenty-two albes, and "a great suit of copes of green colour, namely ninety-six copes, with five chasubles, six tunicles, two dalmatics, seventy-six albes, stoles, and fanons, and all the gear of the high altar and of St. Ælphege and St. Dunstan, of the same suit." Such a set can only have been obtained for the use of the whole convent on some special feast or feasts. Other entries refer to a complete set of ornaments for the altar of St. Thomas (that at the head of the shrine) and the altar ad Coronam in the round chapel of the Holy Trinity.

Some of these ornaments no doubt formed part of the munificent gift of Thomas of Buckingham, bishop of Lincoln, who resigned his see in 1397, and retired to Canterbury, where he died the following 10th March, 1397-8. His gifts to the church are thus described in the Kalendar of Obits :

<sup>1</sup> Most of these have been dealt with in his Architectural History of the conventual buildings of the Monastery of Christ Church in Canterbury (London, 1869), by the late Professor Willis, who has also printed in Appendix No. VI. (p. 187) another copy of the list of benefactions above referred to, preserved among the Cartæ Antiquæ (C. 166).

Et de bonis dicti domini episcopi per disposicionem Thome Chyllynden prioris tunc executoris dicti dompni adquesita sunt ad ecclesiam Cantuariensem ornamenta et vestimenta ad valorem ducentarum quadragintarum librarum. videlicet unum vestimentum nigrum cum toto apparatu. et sex cappis. et unum vestimentum album cum toto apparatu. et triginta una capis unius secte. et unus baculus pastoralis argenteus cum capite deaurato. duo urseoli. et unus calix argenti et deaurati. et viginti [sic] libre circa emendacionem mitre domini Johannis Stratforde quondam archiepiscopi Cantuariensis.<sup>1</sup>

Another benefactor was archbishop William Courtenay (1381-1396), whose will contains, inter alia, the following bequests :

Item lego ecclesie mee metropolitane pulcherimam et optimam capam meam rubiam cum perles debrauditam.

Item lego eidem ecclesie mee viride vestimentum meum aureum cum cervis albis intextis cum aurifragio et archangelis et toto apparatu videlicet septem capis.

Item lego eidem ecclesie mee melius vestimentum meum album de auro cum cervis sive rubijs bestijs diasperatis cum vij capis ejusdem secte.<sup>2</sup>

These vestments cannot positively be identified in Chillenden's list, but they are probably included under a general heading of vestimentum. Most of them will be found in the inventory of 1540. The green vestment perhaps formed part of the "great suit of copes" of that colour, to which archbishop Thomas Arundel gave twenty-one.<sup>3</sup>

The jewels enumerated in the second sub-section call for no special remark. The crosier, cruets and chalice given by bishop John of Buckingham are, however, duly entered, as well as Stratford's mitre to the repair of which he subscribed. It is interesting to notice also that two of the eight mitres mentioned were new ones made of old or broken silver found in the vestry. The last item refers to the holder for the candle hallowed by the prior on the feast of the Purification at the blessing of candles before mass, and perhaps carried in the procession by one of the sacrists. At Westminster a magnus cereus was called Mariale.<sup>1</sup> At Salisbury, according to the Processionale of 1508, one of the candles was reserved for the blessing of the fonts at Easter and Pentecost.<sup>2</sup>

The following is the list of the ornaments and jewels:

The story of the rebuilding of the nave through Chillenden's exertions has been well told by Professor Willis in his Architectural History. He was not, however, then aware that to Chillenden we owe the reconstruction of the great flight of steps leading from the nave up to the quire, and the magnificent pulpitum or screen with images of kings still standing on the top of the steps. The chapel of the Blessed Virgin Mary had since Lanfranc's days occupied the first two bays of the north aisle of the nave, where it was replaced by Chillenden after the rebuilding. It is uncertain what is exactly meant by the Stacio Crucis. It may of course refer to the setting up again of the great Rood, with its attendant images, that surmounted the screen (now removed) at the east end of the nave against which stood the altar of the Holy Cross. But it may also refer to the lines cut in the nave floor to mark the places of the convent in processions when they made a station before the Cross. These are described by Gostling as "two parallel lines cut in the pavement, about eight feet asunder, but in several places interrupted by gravestones, or the removing some of the paving slabs from their first places. These were designed to show what room should be kept clear for public processions. In Drake's plan of the old body of York Minster, we find many circular stones placed in order, that the members of that cathedral might know where each should take his standing before they began their walk."<sup>1</sup> Besides the York examples quoted by Gostling, other rows of circular stones existed at Lincoln and Wells, while at Fountains Abbey similar rows of square slabs, each incised with a circle, still remain in place under the turf.

The "new altar" mentioned in the list of Chillenden's works was probably part of some important reconstruction of the high altar and its surroundings that was carried out at the end of the fourteenth century and towards the building of which John of Buckingham, bishop of Lincoln (1363-1397), gave the sum of £20.<sup>2</sup> The Kalendar of Obits also states that part of the magnificent donation of over £1,000 sterling by king Richard II. was given ad fabricam summi altaris.<sup>3</sup> These gifts were probably spent upon the building of the stone reredos, which was no doubt a low wall, like that still standing in Westminster abbey church, extending across the presbytery, and enriched with tabernacle work and imagery on both sides. Against it stood the three altars, viz. the high altar and those of St. Ælphege and St. Dunstan, with doors between leading to the space behind and to the steps up to the archbishop's marble chair. We learn from another source that before 1395, archbishop Courtenay had bestowed upon the church "a precious image of the Holy Trinity, with six apostles of silver, and nobly gilt, for the table of the high altar" of the estimated value of £340,<sup>4</sup> and arch-

<sup>1</sup> William Gostling, A Walk in and about the City of Canterbury (second edition, Canterbury, 1777), 203. The lines in the floor are not mentioned in the first edition of 1774. They disappeared when the nave was repaved in 1787-8.

<sup>3</sup> According to the Kalendar of Obits, Richard II.: "Dedit eciam ad fabricam summi altaris et navis ecclesiæ diversis vicibus ultra jocalia oblata per eum [ad feretrum sancti Thome erased in MS.] et beate marie in criptis ultra mille libras sterlingorum." Lambeth MS. 20. f. 170.

bishop Arundel, besides a gold chalice and two gold cruets of the value of 200 marks, added "the three silver basons hanging before the high altar."<sup>1</sup> Chillenden's share is stated in the Kalendar of Obits to have been that "he decently ornamented the high altar together with the two altars of St. Dunstan and St. Ælphege with work of silver and gold, and wood curiously carved," which agrees with the statement under notice that he gave "a new altar with a table of silver and gilt" (to which archbishop Courtenay added the images described) "with the furniture of the altars of St. Ælphege and St. Dunstan."

The Kalendar of Obits says nothing of the curious and unusual arrangement for hanging the pyx described in the list under notice as "an image of the Blessed Virgin with four angels silver and gilt and with a precious cup of gold with gems in the hand of the Virgin for putting in the body of Christ, ascending and descending at pleasure."<sup>2</sup>

The four altars outside the quire which were newly decorated with paintings by Chillenden are described in the Kalendar of Obits as only three in number: "also the two altars on the north side of St. Stephen and St. Martin (i.e. in the north quire transept), and a third on the south side of St. John Evangelist (i.e. in the south quire

<sup>2</sup> This arrangement was evidently in the mind of John Almyngnam of Walberswick, Suffolk, when he bequeathed £10 to his parish church in 1500, to be spent upon "a canope over the hygh awter, welle done with oure lady and iiij. aungelys and the Holy Ghost goyng upp and downe with a chyme (? cheyne)." See John Nichols, Illustrations of the manners and expences of antient times in England in the 15th, 16th, and 17th centuries (London, 1797), 187.

transept) with laudable painting and woodwork he carefully decorated." This work was done at the beginning of Chillenden's priorate, as appears from the following entry in the sacrist's accounts for 1392-3:

 Et tantum hoc anno propter picturam mesure beate marie virginis Et tabulam inferiorem ad altare sancti
 Stephani Et ij tabulas parvas superiores ad altare sancti Martini.

The existence of this mensura beate marie virginis in the church does not appear to have been noted hitherto, and it is as difficult to say what was its precise character as to indicate its position. The earliest reference to it which we have met with is in the will, dated 1362, of Edmund Stablegate, citizen of Canterbury, who desires to be buried in Navi ecclesie Christi Cantuariensis prope finem versus West. He directs that four tapers each of twenty-eight pounds weight shall burn round his body on the day of his burial, and afterwards to burn, one before the image of Our Lady in the church of St. Ælphege, another before the image of Our Lady in the crypts of the cathedral church, a third before Our Lady of Queningate, while the fourth was ad arndam coram mensura beate Marie in ecclesia Christi Cantuariensis.<sup>2</sup> Besides the reference to this already given from the payments in the sacrist's accounts for 1392-3, there are in the same record the following items among the receipts which show that it was painted by subscription:

Item de Waltero et Johanna Waldrede et aliis diversis ad picturam mesure beate Marie virginis ...	vjs.
Item de alijs specialibus amicis ... ..	xls.

Of the "measure of Our Lord" a number of examples have been noted. Didron mentions one formerly in the church of St. Denis in France, "une colonne de jaspe que l'on tient estre la mesure de la hauteur de nostre Seigneur Jésus-Christ."<sup>1</sup> This was destroyed in 1793. Another, in the cathedral church of St. John Lateran at Rome is thus described in Voyage Archéologique au xv<sup>e</sup> siècle Allemagne et Italie, printed by Didron :<sup>2</sup>

Pour sortir hors de lad. église et du mesure pourpris, à la main gaulche, y a ung huis à III ou IIII dégrés, et puis une salle, en laquelle y a ung grand marbre, sur IIII colonnes, quy sont dud. marbre, et samble assez estre ung autel ; mais on dict que c'est la haulteur de Nostre-Seigneur Jésus-crist, et vaon dessoubz, en allant à procession.

A more recent account gives the following description of it :

La taille de Notre-Seigneur est indiquée dans le cloître de Saint-Jean-de-Latran par une tablette que supportent quatre colonnes : or, cette tablette donne jusqu'au sol 1 mètre 85 centimètres, mesure identique à celle que j'ai vue a Grotta-Ferrata (États Pontificaux), qui y ajoute 46 centimètres pour les épaules.<sup>3</sup>

No corresponding mesure beate Marie virginis seem to have been noted ; we can therefore only suppose that the painted object at Canterbury which denoted her height was a pillar or shaft of some kind. It will be noticed that the entry in the accounts already quoted associates the mensura with the altars of St. Stephen and St. Martin. Between the places of these altars in the north quire transept, at the foot of the vaulting shaft there, the marble step has been cut away to make room for some object that stood against the shaft. This object was an image of the Blessed Virgin Mary, as we learn from the following curious note :

For further references see a paper by Mr. W. de Gray Birch in Transactions of the Royal Society of Literature, 2nd S. xi. 470-472, "On two Anglo-Saxon Manuscripts in the British Museum," and another by the Rev. W. Sparrow Simpson, D.D., F.S.A., "On a magical roll preserved in the British Museum" in Journal of the British Archaeological Association, xlviii. 38-54, where descriptions are quoted of the measure of Our Lord (mensura Domini nostri Jesu Christi) in Cott. MS. Titus D. xxvi. and Harley Roll, 43. A. 14. The latter is accompanied by a drawing of a cross, 5 inches in length with the memorandum : "This cross xv tymys metyn ys y<sup>e</sup> lenght of oure lord Ihu criste." Since  $5 \times 15 = 75$ , the height of our Lord, according to this, was 6 feet 3 inches.

Anno Domini M<sup>o</sup>CCCC<sup>o</sup> lxxij<sup>o</sup> circa festum Epiphanie Domini emanavit magna aqua in criptis et ad Tumbam beati Thome martiris et in alijs capellis ibidem et duravit per .iiij<sup>or</sup> septimanas. ita quod conventus non potuerunt transire ad illum locum ad processionem Sed transierunt ad ymaginem beate Marie virginis versus dormitorium que est inter altaria Sanctorum Martini et Stephani tamen cerei in criptis erant illuminati tempore processionis Et eodem modo in vigilia purificationis beate Marie et in die post .ij<sup>as</sup>. vespervas Dominus Prior cum conventu steterunt ibidem tamen Missa fuit ibidem omni die et Salve.<sup>1</sup>

It is possible that the pedestal on which this image stood formed the mensura in question.

To those who regard the whitewashing of churches as an invention of the "churchwarden" era, and who consequently in their ignorance ruin many an old building by denuding it of its whitewash and plaster, it will perhaps come as a shock to read that one of Chilenden's great works by which he is to be remembered was "the whitewashing of the whole church, the prior's chapel, the sacristy, and beneath the chapel of St. Andrew." Some interesting items touching the work occur in the sacrist's accounts. Thus in those for 1391-2, among the receipts, we find :

as well as three other like sums "pro eodem." While among the payments is the entry :

Item Albacione Chori Ecclesie xij li. xijs. viij<sup>d</sup>.

In the receipts of the following year we again find :

Item de Domino Priore ad Dealbacionem chori vjs viij<sup>d</sup>.

and further sums of 12s., 13s. 4d., 3s. 4d., 6s. 8d., 3s. 4d., 10s., and 6s. 8d. Also among the payments :

Item pro Dealbacione chori hoc anno vj fi. vijs vjd.

It thus appears that a sum of £19, equivalent at least to £400 at the present time, was spent in two years in whitewashing the quire alone ; what then must the whitewashing of the whole church have cost ?

We have further evidence of the use of whitewash at Canterbury in the treasurers' accounts for 1236, where a payment is entered ; "In dealbacione claustri xxvijs. jd." and in that for 1237 : "Pictor et colores cum dealbacione claustri xxiijs. ijd. ob." A later instance is found in the sacrist's roll for 1469-70 : "In lathamis conductis pro albacione capituli, xijd."

The pavement on the north side of the quire attributed to Chillenden in the last of the items quoted is that still to be seen in the north quire aisle and north quire transept. It consists of square slabs of Purbeck marble set diamondwise, with other slabs laid longitudinally in narrow bands at the sides and down the centre. Except where it has been destroyed for the gratings over the hot water pipes, this interesting pavement is uninjured. It is in marked contrast to the old pavement on the opposite side of the church, which is a medley of slabs of all sizes and divers materials.

V. MISCELLANEOUS NOTES AS TO JEWELS AND ORNAMENTS ACQUIRED DURING THE FIFTEENTH CENTURY.

It has already been mentioned in treating of the ornaments, etc. acquired in the time of prior Thomas Chillenden that no general inventories of the fifteenth century have come down to us. There are nevertheless a number of memoranda and entries in the accounts, in wills, and elsewhere, of considerable interest and importance which ought not to be passed over, especially since many of the ornaments to which they refer are not to be identified in the later inventories.

Among the Cartæ Antiquæ is an imperfect list of the gifts and benefits of Henry Chichele, archbishop from 1414 to 1443. It enumerates, besides sundry silver vessels for use in the monastery :

unum vestimentum integrum solempne et preciosum de albo velveto, cum floribus saracenorum splendide pulverizatum ; una cum duabus cappis et albis ejusdem sectæ et coloris<sup>1</sup>

In the great inventory of 1540<sup>2</sup> are included two copes and "a vestment decon and subdeacon," of white velvet "w<sup>t</sup> burres enbroudered," and "ij stoles and iij phanons" of the same material with burrs of gold, which are very likely those given by archbishop Chichele.

Among the Parker MSS. in the library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, is a small quarto volume entitled: Liber fratris Johannis Stone monachi ecclesie Christi Cantuariensis quem ex suo magno labore composuit Anno Domini Millesimo CCCC<sup>mo</sup> lxxvij<sup>o</sup> Monachatus sui anno quinquagesimo. This MS. is an extremely curious and interesting memorandum book of most miscellaneous character, and contains a large number of entries that throw considerable light upon the topography and dates of different parts of the church and monastic buildings. It ought to be printed in full. Stone's own work does not begin until the eighth leaf, but is preceded by the following interesting note, which is written in a different hand:

These interesting items include the making in all of the following vestments, etc. :

- (1) frontals for each of the three altars in the quire, viz. the high altar and the altars of St. Dunstan and St. Ælphege, of blue velvet embroidered with gold archangels (to the number of thirty-three) at a cost of 10 marks ;
- (2) a set of frontals for the three altars, of green satin and velvet with red fringe, embroidered with gold, and lined with green and red buckram ;
- (3) a carpet or tapet of green with swans ;
- (4) a set of curtains of green silk cloth painted with gold swans, and fringed with red ; and
- (5) a carpet or tapet of blue with an eagle in the midst.

These green and blue frontals are identical with those mentioned in the Inventory of 1540.<sup>2</sup>

Of the subsequent entries in the manuscript under notice only one need here be quoted. It records the death in 1419, of Thomas Selmiston, doubtless a monk, concerning whom Stone says :

<sup>1</sup> Probably for lining or relining six copes.

Erat enim in arte brudataria artifex curiosissimus in toto regno non habens sibi similem. quod evidenter apparet in casula aurea vestimenti .T. Herne. Et in vestimento Ricardi Ruton et in multis aliis locis in vestiario. (f. 106.)

The exercise of the art of embroidery was not uncommon in monasteries, and many instances of such handiwork of the monks might be quoted. Even abbots did not consider it beneath their dignity to practise the art, for John Wigmore, abbot of St. Peter's abbey, Gloucester, from 1329 to 1337, gave to his monastery a suit of vestments de viridi samyt cum volucris deauratis pro festo Pentecostes quam propriis manibus texuit et fecit.<sup>1</sup>

The Kalendar of Obits<sup>2</sup> also contains notices of various gifts and bequests of ornaments during the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries.

<sup>1</sup> These may be the "iij tappette for the high aulter of red tapestrie" mentioned in the Inventory of 1540.

Among them are the gift of a golden censer to the high altar by Amyas Tatresale, 1416,<sup>1</sup> and of a mitre and crosier by Richard Martin, suffragan bishop,<sup>2</sup> probably bishop of Waterford and Lismore 1472-1475. Joan Frevyll, apparently about 1520, also gave tres Cappas de rubio tessuto in pectorali habentes Jesus cum corona.<sup>3</sup>

Of Thomas Bouchier, archbishop from 1454 to 1486, it is recorded :

Qui contulit huic ecclesie pulcherimum [sic] ymaginem de sancta Trinitate de auro et gemmis ornatam. atque viginti septem<sup>4</sup> cappis de rubio tessuto. cum toto apparatu pro sacerdote diacono et subdiacono unius secte.<sup>5</sup>

Of these gifts we fortunately obtain further particulars from the archbishop's will :

Item do et lego priori et capitulo ecclesie mee Christi Cantuañ. et eorum successoribus ob honorem sancte Trinitatis sanctorum Alphegi et gloriosi Thome martiris unam ymaginem sancte Trinitatis de puro auro cum le dyademe et xj balassis x saphiris et xliij gemmis nuncupatis perlys. unum vestimentum integrum de panno aureo rubeo vocato rede tissue pyerled videlicet unam capsulam<sup>6</sup> duas dalmaticas cum toto apparatu et unam Cappam ejusdem secte cum gemmis preciosis in le orfres infixis et garneizatis et xxvj Capas de rubio tissue cum orfres complet ad serviendum Deo in eadem ecclesia pro perpetuo.<sup>7</sup>

Whether this golden image of the Holy Trinity was given to the high altar or to St. Thomas's shrine does not appear. The vestments with the jewelled orphreys cannot positively be identified in the great inventory of 1540;<sup>8</sup> probably their richness led to their being reserved for "the king's use." But the same inventory mentions "viij copes of red golde velvet baudekyn tysshew wth orpheras enbroudered" and "xvj copes of the same silke

w<sup>t</sup> orpheras of the same" which may be the survivors of Bouchier's twenty-six copes of red tissue.

Of John Morton, archbishop from 1486 to 1500, the Kalendar of Obits has the following interesting record:

Tanto enim amore matrem suam sanctissimam Cantuariensem videlicet ecclesiam amplexus est. ut eam munere amplissimo Cappis videlicet octoginta albi coloris ditissimis ornatissimisque cum omnibus alijs ad presbiterum. diaconum. subdiaconumque pertinentibus. suo nomine armis proprijs ex omni parte auro purissimo desuper textis. litterisque decentissimis. hanc sententiam suavissimam. Deo sit gratiarum actio componentibus: ad Dei laudem suique memoriam relinqueret donatam. Pallium eciam funerale ex nigro bisso pulcherimum corporibus defunctorum deputatum. auro purissimo undique circumseptum. magna ex sua munificencia contulit.<sup>1</sup>

When the inventory of 1540 was taken there survived fifty<sup>2</sup> copes "of white golde baudekyn wth golde of Moreton's gifte w<sup>t</sup> Orpheras of velvet golde baudekyn," "one vestment deacon and subdeacon of white golde baudekyn w<sup>t</sup> orpheras cloth of golde tysshew of Moretons gifte," and "iij stoles and ij phanons of Moretons riche"; also "one riche hersecloth of blacke and white golde baudekyn wth a frynge of redde and grene silke and golde," probably that given by Morton.

But by far the longest entry in the Kalendar of Obits is that recording the gifts and good works of Thomas Goldston, the second prior of that name, who held office from 1494-5 to 1517. Besides his great work in connexion with the rebuilding of the central tower, "angyll stepyll vulgariter nuncupatam," he is credited with the following:

In choro eciam libros nonnullos ad Dei honorem et ecclesie. perpulcra litteratura ac satis polita exarari fecit. Magnum videlicet gradale quod quidem aureis literis floribus et armis. decenti pictura inauratis pulcherrime ornavit. Missale quoque perpulcrum ad usum sacerdotum summe Quam quidem massam argenteam in formam capitis dictus prior decenter ac satis artificiose fabricari fecit. in quo eandem porciunculam capitis honorifice ac reverenter fecit collocari. ipsumque inter reliquias ecclesie ut decuit voluit conservari. <sup>1</sup> In 1315 this was kept in the great relic cupboard in the presbytery (p. 80).

<sup>2</sup> This scrutiny was made on 22nd April 1508 on account of the claim of the Abbey of Glastonbury to possess the actual relics of St. Dunstan. An account of the Canterbury scrutiny and part of the correspondence with Glastonbury has been printed by Wharton in Anglia Sacra, ii. 227, etc. The full text will be found in MS. E. 27 and in Register R. ff. 183-188b; both in possession of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury.

<sup>3</sup> It is possible that the head enclosed in silver which Erasmus says was shewn to him in the crypt was this new relic of St. Dunstan. It was certainly not a relic of St. Thomas.

Ad funera eciam fratrum debite curanda in solemptni missa de requie [sic] quando celebretur pro eis duas casulas cum iiij<sup>or</sup> tunicis et duabus cappis de velveto et nigro coloris ad eadem funera solemptniter curanda cum antiqua apparitura decenter ac honorifice reparavit. Capellam quoque prioris diversis ornamentis viz. casulis. curtinis. ac tapetis diversi coloris honeste decoravit.<sup>1</sup>

It will be seen from this record that, besides the service-books and relics noted in the first part of it, the church was indebted to prior Thomas Goldston II. for the following ornaments :

- (1) a brass eagle desk ;
- (2) three Arras hangings with the story of the Blessed Virgin Mary, for the adornment of the quire ;
- (3) two precious copes with golden archangels, and two other rich copes of blue velvet with gold fleurs-de-lis ;
- (4) a chasuble, a pair of tunics, and ten copes of a suit, of blue cloth of gold ;
- (5) a chasuble, two tunics, and as many copes of white damask for feasts of our Lady ;
- (6) the repair of two chasubles, four tunics, and two copes of black velvet, with old apparels, for masses of the dead ; and
- (7) divers ornaments for use in the prior's chapel.

Most, if not all, of the ornaments in question, except those for the prior's chapel, may be identified in the inventory of 1540, but to avoid needless repetition it will be better to defer the notice of the fact until that document be under consideration.

VI. INVENTORIES OF THE KEEPER OF THE MARTYRDOM OF ST. THOMAS, 1500 AND 1503.

AMONG the manuscripts of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury is a long and narrow book of 150 leaves, numbered on the back [C.II.]. It is written on paper, and appears to be the memorandum book of a monk of Christchurch, Canterbury, one William Ingram, who held the office of penitenciarius from 1511 to 1532. The greater part of the volume is filled with various accounts and memoranda relating to his office, but it also contains a number of interesting inventories of earlier date, made while Ingram was custos Martirii or Keeper of the Martyrdom. These are not arranged in chronological order, and it is clear from later entries incorporated in them that they have been transcribed from some other record, now lost.

The Martyrdom was the name given in after years to that part of the north transept where St. Thomas met with his death in 1170, and was in charge of a special officer called custos Martirii. But the name of the Martyrdom was subsequently extended to the whole area of the transept. The site of the murder can be absolutely fixed by the flat wall<sup>1</sup> to which archdeacon Chapman's monument is now attached, between the passage to the crypt and the Lady Chapel, which occupies the site of the old apsidal chapel of St. Benedict.<sup>2</sup> At the time of the archbishop's murder the northern part of the transept was divided into two stories by a stone vault, which was carried on the south side by two arches resting on a central pillar and eastern and western responds. Beneath the easternmost arch the archbishop was slain. Gervase tells us that the pillar and the vault resting on it "in process of time were taken down out of respect for the martyr, that an altar elevated on the place of martyrdom might be seen at a greater distance."<sup>1</sup> This altar apparently was "elevated" on a platform of two steps in front of the wall in question, and this platform remained intact through all the subsequent alterations to this part of the church, for since its removal in the 16th century the Norman plinth of Lanfranc's time and the scar left by the cutting away of the respond have become visible. The unfinished south end<sup>2</sup> of the two steps at the entrance of the Lady Chapel seems to show that the platform of the Martyrdom altar returned westwards in continuation of them, as far as the grave slabs of priors William Selling and Thomas Goldston II.<sup>3</sup> Its southern limit is fixed by <sup>1</sup> "Pilarius autem ille qui in medio crucis hujus steterat et fornix ei innitens, processu temporis, ob reverentiam martyris demolita sunt, ut altare in loco martyrii elevatum, ampliori spatio cerneretur." Gervase, Opera Historica (Rolls' Series 73), i. 11. It is clear from this that there was no altar here until after St. Thomas's death. The numerous representations of the martyrdom which shew the archbishop being slain before or at an altar, and in mass vestments, are historically inaccurate.

<sup>2</sup> This chapel was pulled down and rebuilt by prior Thomas Goldston I. between 1448 and 1455. The altar in it was hallowed on October 18th in the latter year in honour of the Assumption of Our Lady and St. Benedict, and the chapel was first used on the following December 21st. (C.C.C.C., Parker MS. 417, f. 54.) See post, pp. 162, 163.

<sup>2</sup> On the floor at the end of these steps are the remains of the fastening of an iron grate, and the hole of another such fastening exists at the corner of the passage to the crypt, also at the floor level. The lost grate does not seem to have had anything to do with the Martyrdom altar, but to have been placed in front of archdeacon Chapman's monument.

<sup>3</sup> Prior Selling, according to C.C.C.C. MS. 298, f. 118, was buried "ad martirium sancti Thome coram altari" and prior Thomas Goldston II. "ad martirium sancti Thome martiris juxta predecessorem sui." Prior Selling's slab is still in place, but that of prior Goldston has been destroyed, with the exception of its western end, to make way for a more recent memorial. Next to Selling's slab is that of archbishop Dean, beyond which lies the large slab of archbishop Stafford and to the north that of prior Fynch. All these are recorded (loc. cit.) to have been buried "ad martirium." Archbishop Dean in his will desires to be buried "in illo loco quo beatus martir Thomas olim dicte ecclesie Archiepiscopus gladijs impiorum occubuit ubi inibi convenientius fieri possit" under a marble stone with his effigy in brass. He also directs that for twenty years after his death mass shall be said daily for him "apud altare martirii sancti Thome martiris." (Register Q. ff. 165*b*. etc.)

the passage to the crypt. This would give 8 feet  $4\frac{3}{4}$  inches as the length of the lower step and 7 feet as its projection westwards. The upper step would then be 6 feet  $10\frac{3}{4}$  inches long, and 5 feet 6 inches wide. (See plan on p. 147.) Erasmus says that the altar he saw here was a wooden one, sacred to the Virgin.

William Ingram has preserved two inventories of the goods pertaining to the Martyrdom altar while he was custos Martirii. The first of these was taken on May 19th, 1500, the other on July 6th 1503. While enumerating practically the same ornaments, the two inventories differ considerably in detail, the later being much fuller than the earlier.

The text of the first inventory is as follows :

The second inventory is arranged somewhat differently from the first, the various ornaments being classified under headings instead of being run together in one list. The text is as follows :

I [sic].

From these inventories it appears that the altar was known as that of St. Thomas. Above it was fixed, probably on a bracket or in a niche, and beneath a canopy, an image of the martyred archbishop, before which was a herse or candleholder that held three tapers. For the altar itself were two copper-gilt candlesticks, and there was also a brass candlestick "with a double nozzle proceeding from the stem." No cross or crucifix is mentioned. The other "jewels" included a silver chalice and paten, two pairs of cruets of pewter or tin, an ivory pyx, a pax of the same material, two texts, and a copper case or coffer set with crystals, probably to keep the relics in or to receive offerings. The second chalice of the later inventory, though in charge of the keeper of the Martyrdom, was given in 1509 "for the use of the high altar." The pair of balances mentioned in the inventory of 1500 may have been for weighing valuables or broken silver offered at the Martyrdom altar, such as the jewels noted above as sold in 1496.

Of furniture for the altar there seems to have been good store; there being six suits of vestments, all of red or purple save one white set, with frontals to match, and two sets of curtains or costers for the sides of the altar, one of red, the other white with black letters. There were also divers corporals and their cases, towels, carpets, cushions for the massbook, etc.

The chief attraction of the altar was of course the relics preserved at it. First on the list are two gold rings set with sapphires, formerly belonging to or worn by St. Thomas and St. Edmund the archbishop, "of great and wonderful virtue for relieving the eyes of sick persons." The other relics were kept together. Foremost among them, in a wooden case, was the cuspis gladij or point of Richard the Breton's sword, which was shivered on the pavement by the force of the last blow struck at St. Thomas, tam cuspidem quam gladii sui capulum reliquit ecclesiæ says Benedict.<sup>1</sup> The pommel of the hilt here referred to is mentioned in the next item, and was probably kept with it. The other relics call for no special remark, save that those of the saints were fixed over the sword-point under a great beryl or crystal. This sword-point seems usually to have stood upon or over the altar, and had a special set of coverings, which are enumerated in the inventories, that were withdrawn on such occasions as the relic was displayed.

Among Ingram's accounts are a few entries which refer to this altar and its adjuncts :

Why the iron rod or bar before St. Thomas's image should have been furnished with a lock and key it is difficult to say.

The "red door" above mentioned is referred to in a payment made the previous year "pro reparatione cere inferioris hostii prope claustrum vocati le red dur et pro una nova clave pertinenti ad eundem." It was opposite the cloister door, and therefore "before the relics" at the Martyrdom altar, in a stone wall or partition built in 1381-2,<sup>1</sup> in connexion with prior Chillenden's rearrangement of the great flight of steps, to enclose a lobby and staircase on the west side of the transept by which the monks could go from the cloister to the quire without mixing with pilgrims visiting the Martyrdom. (See plan, p. 147.) Somner quotes these "Verses, on each leaf of the door one, yet legible in part, importing that St. Thomas was martyred within this place :

Est sacer intra locus, venerabilis, atque beatus, Presul ubi sanctus Thomas est Martyrizatus."<sup>2</sup>

Gostling also gives the same inscription.<sup>3</sup>

The part of the wall protecting the steps remains, but originally it extended further to beyond the red door and

<sup>1</sup> 1381-2, "In partem pro novo Muro faciendo juxta martirio. xxijs. iiijd." Treasurers' Accounts. An older barrier, also containing a door into the Martyrdom, must have occupied the same position, as appears by the following note of another historical event that took place in this part of the church in 1298: "Quinto Idus Septembris dominus Robertus Cantuariensis Archiepiscopus celebravit sponsalia inter dominum Edwardum Regem Anglie et Margaretam sororem Regis Francie in ostio Ecclesie versus Claustrum juxta Hostium martirij sancti Thome. Et subsequenter celebravit missam sponsalium ad altare feretri sancti Thome." (Register Q. f. xxix.)

<sup>2</sup> William Somner, The Antiquities of Canterbury. The second edition, revised and enlarged by Nicholas Battely (London, 1703) part i. 91. It is not quite clear whether the inscription read across the two leaves of the door as it is printed above, or whether it was arranged thus :

Est sacer intra locus	Presul ubi sanctus
venerabilis atque beatus	Thomas est martyrizatus.

then turned obliquely to join the staircase turret in the angle, as shewn in Dart's plan. "A grave," says Gostling, "was dug here, in the year 1734, so near this partition, that the foundation of it gave way; to prevent mischief therefore, it was taken down, and the way laid open to it."<sup>1</sup> The place of the door is still indicated by the bolt holes in the pavement.

Before quitting the Martyrdom it will be interesting to note the account given by Erasmus of what he saw in it: "There," he says, "is shewn a wooden altar sacred to the Holy Virgin, insignificant, and not worth visiting, save as a monument of antiquity, putting to shame the luxury in these times. There the holy man is said to have uttered a last farewell to the Virgin, when death was nigh at hand. On the altar is the point of the sword with which the head of the most excellent prelate was cleft and his brain mixed together in order that his death might be more speedy. The sacred rust of this sword, from love of the martyr, we religiously kissed."<sup>2</sup>

It is reasonable to suppose that the Martyrdom altar was protected in some way, either by a screen or an iron grate. No definite record of such has, however, yet been noticed.

By a formal deed, dated in their chapter house the 6th day of April, 1507, Thomas (Goldston II) the prior and the convent of Christchurch, Canterbury, granted to William Warham, archbishop of Canterbury (1504-1532), "who, on account of the very pious affection and singular devotion which he always had and has towards his aforesaid church and the holy martyr Thomas, patron of the same church, desired to be buried therein," a place of sepulture which Et tumulum sepulchrum sive monumentum ad dicti sui cadaveris sepulturam de novo ibidem erexerit construxerit et edificaverit.

The prior and convent accordingly promise to undertake for themselves and their successors for ever that neither they nor their said successors shall at any time amove or transfer, or allow to be moved, transferred, taken away or demolished

From Ingram's memorandum book<sup>1</sup> we learn that the stone altar in Warham's chapel had been dedicated on 30th March 1507, a week before the deed just cited, by the prior of Dover, John Thornton, who was then acting as the archbishop's suffragan bishop, in honour of Our Saviour and All Saints and to the memory of the Blessed Virgin Mary. On the 4th April following, which was Easter Day and the feast of St. Ambrose, the archbishop's chantry was begun at the same altar, and in the same year, Ingram adds, the building of the chapel was finished. A second memorandum states that the stone altar above referred to was removed from its original place to within the said oratory and a new slab laid upon it on 19th August of the same year, and by the aforesaid suffragan was hallowed a second time to the memory of the Blessed Virgin Mary and in honour of St. Margaret,<sup>2</sup> on the 4th September following.

The text of Ingram's memoranda is as follows :

<sup>2</sup> A new dedication was not unusual on the removal of an altar or rebuilding of a chapel.

Memorandum eciam quod illud altare lapideum fuit interius in illo oratorio remotum cum novo lapide desuper posito xiiij<sup>o</sup> kalendis Septembris Anno supradicto Et per venerabilem patrem ac dominum predictum suffragannium secunda vice dedicatum. Ad memoriam beate virginis Marie et ad honorem sancte Margarete virginis et martiris videlicet ijo nonas Septembris anno supradicto.

Then follow 10 $\frac{1}{2}$  leaves with the names of those who celebrated in the chapel weekly for the next few years.

Further on in the manuscript, and immediately after the second of the inventories of the ornaments of the Martyrdom altar, is the following :

Inventorium in oratorio domini archiepiscopi.

Item unum frontallum de blodio le saten burges cum armis domini archiepiscopi et viij flowrdelyce de auro brudat'.

Item unum pendens de cerico blodio cum xiiij flowrdelyse de auro brudat' per dominum Thomam Ykham precentorem.

Item duo tuelle de la napre pro altari.

Item duo curtene de cerico blodio.

Item unum frons de panno aureo vetus cum tuella linea.

Item unum pendens de panno aureo cum tuella de le canvas.

Item duo virge ferree pro curtenis.

Item una parva campana.

Item una virga pro tuella.

Item tres ciste cum ceris et clavibus.

The inventory is without date, but it must have been made shortly after the completion of the chapel. It enumerates two sets, each including a frontal for beneath and a hanging for above, of hangings for the altar : one of blue silk with gold fleurs-de-lis, and a pair of curtains or costers to match ; the other of cloth of gold. Each set had its corresponding "towels" of linen. The only other articles of furniture mentioned are a sacring bell, and three chests or coffers with locks and keys, for holding the gear of the chapel. No chalice or other plate is mentioned.

In the great inventory of 1540<sup>1</sup> is the following inventory of the goods then in the chapel, which it is interesting to compare with that made by William Ingram :

- Warhams    Item one Chalice gilte pōz ————— xvoz q<sup>r</sup> di

This list, it will be seen, enumerates three suits of vestments, one of white, and two of red, seven altar clothes (i.e. frontals or hangings) of silk or damask and four linen clothes, and three pairs of curtains. Also a gilt chalice, a mass-book, one coffer (instead of three), an image of the founder, and "ij tables." The only survivor of the ornaments in the former list is the blue satin-of-Bruges altar frontal with fleurs-de-lis of Venice gold. As the archbishop's chantry priests were seculars the massbook was of Sarum Use. The two tables of "the hedde of Jhesus" perhaps represented the Vernicle, but they may also have been examples of the painted alabaster tablets called "St. John's Heads," with the head of St. John Baptist in a charger accompanied by various accessories.<sup>1</sup>

Among the accounts in Ingram's memorandum book are several that can hardly refer to the fittings and furniture of any other than Warham's chapel :

As William Warham was translated from London to Canterbury on 29th November 1503, received the temporalities on 24th January 1503-4, and was enthroned on 9th March following, these entries, if they all refer to his chapel, would seem to shew that the altar was set up shortly after the archbishop's arrival at Canterbury, and followed by the erection of the chapel and monument; the altar being first transferred to the new monument and afterwards to the chapel beyond. The chapel and monument, as we have seen, were not completed until three years later, which is in no wise an unreasonably long time.

On the archbishop's death, on 23rd August 1532, he was buried in his chapel, according to the direction in his will, which was drawn up on 25th November 1530 :

Among other bequests are the following :

Item lego sacello meo in quo Deo volente corpus meum sepelietur duo paria vestimentorum meorum optimorum, duos calices meos optimos, duas phiolas meas optimas argenteas et deauratas vulgariter nuncupatas crucettes.<sup>2</sup>

The two pairs (i.e. suits) of vestments and one of the chalices may be among the contents of the chapel given in the inventory of 1540, but the other ornaments are certainly not included.

Although Warham's Chapel has practically disappeared there are sufficient remains and traces of it left to enable its plan and arrangements to be made out with considerable certainty.

The archbishop's monument now consists of a high tomb, upon which is laid his effigy in stone, placed centrally within a wide and deep recess, 11 feet 5 inches long and 2 feet 5 inches deep, in the north wall of the north transept. The recess has panelled walls and a groined ceiling and in front of it is a rich triple canopy with flanking niches for images. In each end of the recess are two panels, and above them a bracket and shallow niche for an image, and at the back are six panels each surmounted by a like bracket and niche. The tomb has six panels on the side, each containing a shield, and two panels with shields at each end. The whole stands upon a step 6 inches high.

A comparison of the present state of the monument with that represented in Dart's excellent plate<sup>3</sup> will show that drastic and destructive alterations have been made to it, apparently at the beginning of the present century, when the whole was "restored" by the Dean and Chapter. Before that time the tomb stood in the western part of the recess with only its east end and south side free, and the latter had but five shields instead of six as now. There was thus left between the tomb and the east end of the recess an interval of at least 4 feet. Of the six panels at the back only the three westernmost are ancient, the place of the others being originally filled by a blocked arch or doorway which must have been 5 feet wide. Dart's view shews two other features: (1) the projecting bowl of a drain in the east wall of the recess, of which only the base of the corbel and the drain hole now remain; and (2) a perforated panel, which is happily intact, immediately to the west of the door.

The arch or doorway in question originally opened into the space between the transept and the chapter-house. This space is about 25 feet long, with an average width of 9 feet, its sides not being parallel, and is entered from the cloister by a doorway in its west end. It was at one time roofed in. In its north wall are three wide and shallow fourteenth century recesses with segmental heads,<sup>1</sup> which were probably made to contain bookcases for the use of the monks in cloister. But when the new library was built by archbishop Chichele and prior Thomas Goldston I. over the prior's chapel the use of these supplemental bookcases passed away and the place probably afterwards served other purposes. The south wall, which for some height up is part of Lanfranc's transept, originally had a midway buttress, but this has been cut down and the scar plastered over. To the east of it there is now in the wall a four-centred recess, 10 feet 4 inches wide, 16 inches deep and 12 feet high to the apex of the arch, at the back of archbishop Warham's tomb. The recess, which has once been completely bricked up and even now is only partially opened out, is divided vertically into two divisions: one, 6 feet wide, also bricked up, in which was the door or archway above referred to; the other 4 feet 4 inches wide, forms a brickwork backing, with ashlar edge, to the three panels on the other side. About 8 inches west of the recess is the chase (now filled up with bricks) for a wall 10 inches thick that crossed to the chapter-house wall and so enclosed on that side archbishop Warham's chapel. On the east the great transept buttress projects 4 feet 6 inches, leaving an interval of 3 feet  $11\frac{1}{2}$  inches between it and the chapter-house; this was also closed by a wall. The chapel thus formed was 11 feet long and from  $8\frac{1}{2}$  to 9 feet wide. It no doubt received most of its light through the archway between it and the transept; this was fully 5 feet wide and was probably filled with an iron grate, part of which formed the door. The space to the west of the chapel might however have been laid open to the sky by the removal of its roof, so as to allow of a window in the west wall. There was perhaps a smaller window on the east looking into the little court outside the western half of the Lady Chapel. On the western face of the buttress on the east side of the chapel are some interesting remains. The first of these is a shallow recessed panel 2 feet  $11\frac{1}{2}$  inches high, with mouldings along the end and top, for holding the upper frontal of the altar. The panel was at least 4 feet long, but its southern end is covered up by brickwork. Above the panel is a projecting moulded cornice. Both this and the panel are carried across the jamb of the four-centred arch of the recess already referred to, but over so much as is actually wrought in the buttress are two shallow niches (like those within the transept), each 4 feet high, with projecting brackets for images. Above the niches is a cornice with Tudor flowers. There are no signs on the chapel side of the arch or doorway shewn by Dart, but the little traceried panel, which on the transept side is about 9 inches square, is represented in the chapel by a square opening about 15 inches wide, now bricked up. From this it is easy to calculate the relative levels of transept and chapel, inasmuch as the centre of the panel is 5 feet  $4\frac{1}{2}$  inches above the transept floor. The chapel floor appears to have been 3 inches higher, or 3 feet  $8\frac{1}{2}$  inches below the bottom edge of the panel over the altar. This must have stood upon one step, but no traces of it or the altar are now visible. The floor of the chapel has long been destroyed, so also have its end walls and roof. The latter was of wood covered with lead. Under and westward of the site of the altar is apparently the brick vault in which the archbishop was buried. Of the iron grate that no doubt protected the tomb and chapel on the transept side, the clausura ferrea of the agreement made in 1507, there are now no traces.

The accompanying plan of the north transept and its surroundings will help to make the above description clear.

VIII. INVENTORY OF THE CHAPEL OF ST. MICHAEL THE ARCHANGEL, 1511.

THE first inventory in William Ingram's memorandum book, though not the earliest in date, is that of the chapel of St. Michael, drawn up on 7th June, 1511. It enumerates the vestments and altar hangings used in the chapel, and the few ornaments that were required when mass was said, viz. a gilt chalice and paten, a pair of eight-sided cruets of tin or pewter, a pax of the same metal, a pair of latten candlesticks for the altar, and a sacring bell. Also two mass-books and the needful corporals and "towels." No cross is mentioned. The inventory tells us nothing as to the fittings of the chapel, except the rods at the sides of the altar for the costers or ridels. The text of the inventory is as follows :

The chapel of St. Michael is that on the east side of the south transept, a position it has occupied since the days of Lanfranc. The small apsidal chapel of his work was taken down during the reconstruction of the transept in the reigns of Henry V. and Henry VI. and replaced by the present building, the altar in which was hallowed by William Wellys, bishop of Rochester, on 18th December (xv. kal. Jan.) 1439.<sup>2</sup> The chapel was originally separated from the transept by a stone screen, but this has long been taken away and replaced by iron railings with a gate.

The new chapel is a good example of the Perpendicular style then in vogue, and has a rich lierne vault adorned with shields and other heraldic bosses. The central boss bears the arms of Clarence impaling Holland, for Margaret Holland, daughter of Thomas, earl of Kent, who died in 1439, and her second husband, Thomas, duke of Clarence, son of Henry IV., who died in 1421. The principal boss to the east bears the arms of the Duke of Clarence himself, and that to the west the arms of Margaret Holland's first husband, John Beaufort, earl of Somerset, who died 16th March 1408-9. In the centre of the chapel stands the Purbeck marble tomb with splendid alabaster effigies of Margaret Holland and her two husbands. Although no record of the fact seems to exist, it is very probable from the arms on the vaulting that the chapel of St. Michael was rebuilt at the Duchess of Clarence's expense.

John Stone, the Canterbury monk, has the following note under the year 1439:

In hoc anno penultimo die mensis Decembris Obijt domina Margareta ducissa Clarencie in Monasterio de Bermondsey . prope London. Et sepulta est cum maritis suis duobus. scilicet. T[homa]. duce de Clarencia et J[ohanne]. Bewford comite de Somersette in ecclesia Christi Cantuariensi. ex parte australi in capella sancti Michaelis.

Isti supradicti domini sepulti fuerunt ad fferetrum Sancti Thome ex parte Boriali.<sup>1</sup>

That the two husbands had previously been buried near the shrine of St. Thomas seems to have hitherto escaped notice. John Stone's statement is however borne out by several interesting documents. The burial of the Earl of Somerset is thus recorded in the Kalendar of Obits:

xvij kt Aprilis. Item obiit inclite memorie dominus Johannes Bewforde comes de Somersett fratris illustrissimi principis. et domini. domini Henrici quarti dei gracia regis anglie. specialissimus frater noster. qui sepultus fuit in parte boriali [ad feretrum beati Thome.]<sup>2</sup> in die cene Anno domini . millesimo . quadringentesimo nono.<sup>3</sup>

The Duke of Clarence was laid to rest near the shrine, perhaps in the same grave as his kinsman, in accordance with the direction in his will, dated 10th July 1417, that he be buried in the cathedral church of Canterbury ad pedes alte memorie domini et patris mei.<sup>1</sup> Since the grave and tomb of Henry IV. already occupied the arch north of the shrine, the two husbands of Margaret Holland must have been buried beneath the next arch to the east, at the king's feet, where dean Wotton's tomb now is. Their subsequent exhumation and burial in St. Michael's chapel were carried out by order of Henry VI., as appears by the following curious document entered in one of the Christchurch Registers :

Either during the rebuilding of the chapel or in preparing for the graves and tomb of the Duchess of Clarence and her husbands it became necessary to move the remains of archbishop Stephen Langton, who had been buried in a stone coffin with a marble lid in the midst of the old chapel before the altar.<sup>1</sup> The coffin was accordingly taken up and placed under the altar of the new chapel, above ground, where it still remains. This explains the statement in the 16th century list of the archbishops and priors (already referred to), that Stephen Langton sepultus est in ecclesia . . . in capella sancti Michaelis sub altare.<sup>2</sup>

As the altar was but of usual width and the coffin a full-sized one, the difficulty of placing it east and west without projecting beyond the front of the altar was surmounted by piercing the east wall, thrusting the coffin through it until its head was flush with the altar, and building a covering for its foot outside the wall. Inasmuch as the altar was hallowed on December 18th, before the death of the duchess Margaret on the 30th of the same month, and the bodies of her two husbands were not moved until after the 27th January following, it is possible that the singular position of Stephen Langton's coffin may have been an afterthought subsequent to the erection of the altar.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup> The coffin may of course have been removed first to another place and finally deposited under the altar to make way for other persons who were afterwards buried in the chapel. Thus Stone has under date 1431 (f. 19b.): "Dominus Thomas Bewford comes [blank] in ordinacione sancti Dunstani sepultus fuerat in Cimiterio monachorum prope tumbam Sancti Thome martiris. postea sepultus est in capella Sancti Michaelis Archangeli," and in 1453 he notes (f. 48b) the burial in the same chapel of Isabella, daughter of Edmund, duke of Somerset, who had died on the vigil of All Saints. Among the interments in the old chapel may be noted that of prior Richard of Oxenden (1331-1338) on the north side and that of prior Robert Hathbrand his successor (1338-1370) on the south side (Corpus MS. 298, p. 118). Professor Willis, not being aware of the documentary history above quoted, thought that Langton's coffin had "been originally outside the wall, in the churchyard; and thus the new wall, when the chapel was rebuilt and enlarged in the fourteenth [sic] century, was made to stride over the coffin by means of an arch." The Architectural History of Canterbury Cathedral (London, 1845), 129.

The altar itself was raised upon three steps. The lowest, which is still in place, is 5 inches high and 18 inches wide, and crosses the chapel at a distance of 8 feet 7 inches from the east wall. It does not extend quite to the side walls, but abuts against a return of the second step which forms a bench on either side the chapel. This second step is 6 inches high, and was 13 inches wide. The third or uppermost step has been removed, with the exception of the portion beneath Stephen Langton's coffin, but its extent can be recovered from the traces of it on the wall and floor. From these we find it was  $7\frac{1}{2}$  inches high, 13 feet long, and 6 feet wide. The size of the altar can also be obtained from the mark of it on the wall. It was 2 feet 10 inches high, and its slab was 6 feet 6 inches long, and 4 inches thick. The edge was vertical for  $2\frac{1}{2}$  inches, but the lower part was chamfered so that the slab projected  $1\frac{1}{2}$  inches over the block or supports of the altar. As Langton's coffin stands out from the wall 3 feet  $4\frac{1}{2}$  inches it will be seen that if the end of it were flush with the front of the altar, the slab must have been 3 feet 6 inches wide. The extreme height of the coffin is 2 feet 4 inches, so that there was an interval of just 2 inches between the lid and the under surface of the altar slab; its length is about 6 feet 8 inches. The condition of the surface of the coffin shews that it was not intended to be seen, but the polished marble lid must have been always visible, slightly raised above the pavement. It is charged throughout with a staff surmounted by a large cross not unlike a cross pattée.

Above the line of the altar slab the wall is quite plain for a height of 3 feet 7 inches. This space was originally 7 feet 11 inches wide, and flanked by two recesses or niches, each containing a corbel or bracket supported by a shaft. These are still intact, and in the southern one the bracket is hollowed out for a drain. The symmetry of the arrangement has unfortunately been destroyed by the insertion of a third niche, copied from the others, to hold a memorial tablet dated 1836. Above the wall and its flanking niches is a rich embattled cornice with a running scroll of vine-leaves and branches beautifully worked in relief. In the lower edge of this is fixed a series of small iron hooks from which were hung super altare the several hangings referred to in the inventory. The side walls of the chapel have the remains of a similar series of hooks.

On each side of the altar, in the broad hollow of the window jamb, is a large niche for an image, and above them a series of angels holding shields.

IX. INVENTORY OF THE CHAPEL OF ST. BARTHOLOMEW IN THE CRYPTS.

THE inventory of the chapel of St. Michael in William Ingram's memorandum book is followed after an interval of two blank leaves by an "inventory of the chapel of St. Bartholomew in the crypts." It is not dated, but is so similar in form to the preceding inventory that it is probably about the same date, circa 1511.

Where the altar of St. Bartholomew was situated is not known, nor in fact is there any other record of its existence than the inventory under notice. Possibly a change, of which we have no note, was made in the dedication of one of the many altars in the crypt.

As the church possessed a notable relic of St. Bartholomew in the arm given by Cnut or his queen Emma,<sup>1</sup> an altar might in later times have been set up at which this relic was kept.

The inventory enumerates but twelve items. Of these, two relate to suits of vestments, of red and purple respectively. Six relate to the altar furniture, and four to ornaments used at mass. The latter included two cruets, a massbook, and two corporals with their cases. A chalice and candlesticks must have been borrowed from another altar when wanted.

The text of the inventory is as follows :

W. H. ST. J. H.

<sup>1</sup> The words pro spe salutis et incolumitatis which are said to begin the second leaf of the massbook are from the Canon of the Mass. In the older massbooks the Canon was written on the first leaves of the book, and the statement in this case that it was "missale vetus" is thus borne out by the note.

X. INVENTORY OF A CHAPEL.

BESIDES the registers and other bound volumes belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury there are preserved in the Chapter Library a number of scrap-books containing miscellaneous documents. These were collected together from all kinds of sources by the diligence and care of the late Dr. J. Brigstocke Sheppard, and temporarily placed in these scrap-books until the opportunity should arise for identifying a document or restoring it to its place in a series.

Among these miscellanea is a loose leaf of paper from some lost book, measuring  $7\frac{3}{4}$  by  $5\frac{3}{8}$  inches, on which is written, in an early sixteenth century hand, the following inventory :

- Item unum vestimentum viridis coloris.

This was an inventory probably of one of the minor altars in the church, but unfortunately there is nothing by which it can be identified, and the document is without heading. It is written in a curious mixture of Latin and English, and with little regard to order. Whichever the altar was, it was fairly furnished with ornaments. Curiously enough the vestments, with the exception of a red suit and an old chasuble of which the colour is not given, are entirely blue or green. The altar had a frontal of white bustian and another of green silk.

XI. INVENTORIES OF THE CHAPEL OF OUR LADY.

IN the ancient Saxon cathedral church of Canterbury the altar of the Blessed Virgin seems to have been originally the high altar. It was placed in the western apse of the church and had behind it, against the wall, the stone chair of the archbishop.

In the new church built by archbishop Lanfranc the altar of the Blessed Virgin occupied a comparatively subordinate position, at the east end of the north aisle of the nave, where the two first bays formed the Lady Chapel. The principal altar in the nave was of course that of the Holy Cross, beneath the Rood, and as this was essentially a public altar, the altar of Our Lady was no doubt placed near it in order to be more easy of access to layfolk.

The exact position of the Lady Chapel can readily be fixed. Gervase states that archbishop Richard, on his death in 1184, was buried in oratorio sanctæ Mariæ.<sup>1</sup> Somner mentions the same fact and says: "I have it from the Church records verified by the leaden Inscription and pontifical Relicks, to wit, his Cope, Crosier, and Chalice lately found in digging Dr. Anian's Grave, by Sir John Boys his Monument on the North side of the Body, toward the upper end."<sup>2</sup> This monument still remains against the north wall of the second bay of the north aisle, and it is therefore clear that the Lady Chapel occupied at least two bays. Gervase further records (a) the raising of the coffin of archbishop Theobald, who had been buried in 1161 in the chapel of the Holy Trinity, and (b) his subsequent reinterment ante altare Sanctæ Mariæ in navi ecclesiæ in arca plumbea...Tumba quoque

marmorea, sicut ante fuerat, super eum composita est.<sup>1</sup> The marble tomb had long disappeared, but during the repaving of the nave in 1787 the archbishop's lead coffin was found "at the east end of the north aisle," with an inscribed leaden plate with his name, etc. which proved its identity.<sup>2</sup>

During the last quarter of the fifteenth century Lanfranc's nave was taken down and rebuilt under archbishops Simon of Sudbury (1375-1381), William Courtenay (1381-1396), and Thomas Fitzalan of Arundel (1397-1398 and 1399-1413-14). The ruling spirit seems to have been Thomas Chillenden the prior, of whom it is said in the Kalendar of Obits that by the aid of archbishop Arundel Navem istius ecclesie cum capella beate Marie virginis in eadem scita opereque decenti fabricata totaliter renovavit.<sup>3</sup>

The list of Chillenden's benefactions, already referred to,<sup>4</sup> also includes nova capella beate Virginis Marie in eadem navi.

We have here two positive statements that the Lady Chapel was again set up in the nave by Chillenden,<sup>5</sup> and it was certainly there in 1412, as we learn from the Sacrist's accounts. The altar of the Holy Cross was also re-erected in its old place, and its existence there is recorded as late as 1532-3; that it remained until the Suppression is proved by the mention in the inventory of 1540 of a vestment of crimson velvet, etc. "for the crosse aluter."

After 1412 we have not met with any further notice of the Lady Chapel in the nave. This is, however, to be accounted for by the later history of the chapel itself.

<sup>4</sup> See ante, p. 101. Somner says (Op. cit. 92): "That old Chapel was not heard of since the present body of the Church was built." He has however overlooked the record above quoted.

<sup>5</sup> The Kalendar of Obits commemorates on "vii<sup>o</sup> Kal Ianuarij . . . . . domina Amabilia [gobi nobilis mulier qui (sic) written over an erasure] dedit ad fabricam nove Capelle beate Marie virginis in Navi Ecclesie. quatuordecim libras benefactrix nostra." Lambeth MS. 20. f. 247b.

Under date 1448 John Stone has the following note :

Item hoc anno viz. V<sup>o</sup> Idus Septembris feria ij<sup>a</sup> litera dominicalis F. positus est primus lapis ad martirium sancti Thome a venerabili patre domino Johanni [sic] Stafford. Cantuariensis archiepiscopi [sic].<sup>1</sup>

By martirium here is no doubt meant the north transept. This had recently been reconstructed in continuation of the works of the new nave, and although it had not yet been vaulted,<sup>2</sup> it had advanced far beyond the stage of laying its first stone. We have here therefore the record of the beginning of some other new work. This is mentioned again by Stone in 1449, in which year he records the burial by the prior and convent of Sir Henry Gray, lord of Powys,<sup>3</sup> in novo opere juxta martirium sancti Thome.<sup>4</sup>

That this "new work" was a chapel of Our Lady appears by another entry, for which we are also indebted to John Stone, who states that archbishop John Stafford on his death in 1452 was buried juxta martirium sancti Thome martiris ante novam capellam beate Marie virginis.<sup>5</sup>

Three other entries given by Stone not only complete the history of the chapel, but explain several other points :

- (i) 1455. Hoc Anno xv<sup>o</sup> Kal. Novembris dominus Ricardus Episcopus Roffensis consecravit altare in nova capella sancte Marie juxta Martirium Sancti Thome in honore Assumptionis beate Marie et sancti Benedicti.
- (ii) Item hoc anno xij<sup>o</sup> Kal. Januarij dominica iiij<sup>a</sup> adventus Domini viz. in die sancti Thome Monachi intraverunt novam capellam sancte Marie et sancti Benedicti juxta martirium sancti Thome.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>6</sup> C.C.C.C. Parker MS. 417, f. 54.

(iii) In 1468 Prior Thomas Goldston I. died, and was buried in nova capella beate Marie quam erexit juxta martirium sancti Thome martiris prope hostium quod ducit ad claustrum in monumento suo novo quod exciderat de petra ubi nondum quisquam positus fuerat.<sup>1</sup>

Concerning prior Thomas Goldston the Kalendar of Obits says :

Edificavit enim in boriali parte hujus ecclesie. capellam in honorem beate virginis marie. in qua et sepultus est : Quam videlicet capellam. cum testitudine lapidea valde artificiosa. coopertura et plumbo. fenestris vitreatis. et alijs omnibus ad eam pertinentibus. complevit. Atrij quoque ejusdem capelle. parietes cum coopertura de plumbo absque testudine construxit.<sup>2</sup>

We learn from these entries that the old apsidal chapel of St. Benedict was taken down, and the first stone of a new chapel laid on 9th September, 1448. In January, 1449-50, the walls were carried up sufficiently high for lord Powys to be buried in the chapel, and before the end of 1455 the whole was finished and the altar dedicated in honour of the Assumption of Our Lady and St. Benedict. The old dedication however was soon forgotten, and henceforth the chapel appears as that of Our Lady.<sup>3</sup> It was first used on the 4th Sunday in Advent, being the feast of St. Thomas the Apostle, 1455.

Two inventories of the goods and ornaments of the Lady Chapel have come down to us.

The first is preserved among the miscellaneous documents before referred to. It is written on parchment and has at the bottom a pendent tag without trace of a seal. It is not dated, but as it is written throughout

<sup>3</sup> In the Sacrist's Account for 1392-3 mention is made of an image of the Blessed Virgin Mary, in St. Benedict's chapel, before which a light was burned all night. The presence of this image may have suggested the association of Our Lady with St. Benedict when the chapel was rebuilt.

The second list forms part of the long inventory made in 1540, and presently to be noticed, of the plate, ornaments, and vestments left in the church after the suppression of the monastery. It is here printed separately for comparison with the other little inventory, to which it both supplies details and adds further information :

<sup>2</sup> One of these massbooks was bound in 1493-4, as appears by the Sacrist's Account for that year : "Iohanni Saundyr pro ligacione duorum librorum missalium quorum unus servit altare sancte [sic] Gregorij et alter capelle beate Marie prope Martirium. iiij. s. viij d."

As befitted a chapel of Our Lady, all the ornaments used at or upon its altar were white ; the five suits of vestments, the hangings, and the side curtains, both festal and ferial. The blue velvet corporas case was the only exception. The earlier list alone mentions two latten candlesticks for the altar. Neither inventory specifies chalice and paten, cruets, pax, or any other necessary plate ; perhaps they were borrowed at need from another altar.

The large number of music books given in the first list is explained by the fact that the chapel was fitted up as a quire.

The chapel is a handsome structure, of two bays, with a rich fan vault. It is entered from the transept by a lofty arch, which is closed by a stone screen of beautiful design and workmanship, with heavily grated traceried openings. The stalls occupied the western bay, and to accommodate these and their canopies the richly ornamented jambs of the window arches, which come down to the floor, have been ruthlessly cut away. Above the stalls went "the hangyng off the chapel ffor bothe the syde" which the second list describes as "ij pecce of tapestry with angell for the quyre there." The chapel was further furnished with two pairs of organs and "one large desk" for the chanters. On the north side near the east end is a small doorway, now blocked, which led into the narrow space between the chapel and the chapter house. The eastern half of this formed the atrium or vestry mentioned in the Kalendar of Obits. Part of its east wall remains, with traces of the little window there. The vestry had, as stated above, a wooden roof only, covered with lead. The floor of the chapel is composed of large square tiles, originally black and yellow alternately, but is now much patched and disturbed, and nothing satisfactory as to the arrangements of the chapel can be made out from it. In the western part of the easternmost bay is a row of four grave slabs. The first to the south is of Purbeck marble, and much decayed, but retains the rivets and a large patch of pitch that mark the place of a central figure in brass, with four shields and a marginal inscription. The next slab is a modern one laid down in 1746. The third is a decayed one of Purbeck marble with the casement of the brass of a mitred figure with a crosier, beneath a triple canopy, and with marginal inscription. The fourth, that nearest to the north, is a greatly decayed and broken slab of Bethersden marble; the rivets shew that it was once inlaid with a brass figure with canopy and marginal inscription. Of these slabs there can be little doubt that the third covers the grave of prior Thomas Goldston I. who built the chapel, and was buried in it in 1468. The fourth probably marks the grave of Sir Henry Gray, lord of Powys, who was buried in the chapel in 1449-50, while it was in building. Whom the first commemorates is not at present known.

To the east of the grave slabs the floor has been laid with tiles like the rest of the chapel, and all traces of the altar platform obliterated. The mark of the lowest step is, however, fortunately left on the north wall, from which it appears to have been 6 inches high and to have extended across the chapel at a distance of 8 feet 8 inches from the east wall. The second step can in like manner be shewn to have been 11 feet 5 inches long, and 7 inches high, but its projection eastward may only be conjectured as about 7 feet. An examination of the east wall, which is partly, but fortunately not entirely, hidden by later monuments, shews that there was a third step, also 7 inches high, but its limits cannot be fixed. On this stood the altar, which was 7 feet 6 inches long, and 3 feet 2 inches high. From a chase which was begun for it on the north its slab seems to have been  $4\frac{1}{2}$  inches thick. Above the altar slab was a plain wall surface like that in St. Michael's chapel, 3 feet 8 inches high, and as long as the altar. It was usually covered by the "hanging for above over the aulter" mentioned in the inventory. The place of the altar is flanked by two traceried panels, in each of which, at a height of 6 feet 7 inches from the present floor (or 5 feet from the altar step), and about 7 inches from the altar end, is a small iron loop for the rods of the side curtains. The panels and altar space are surmounted by a rich embattled cornice at the base of the window, with demi-angels holding scrolls inscribed Sanctus Sanctus, with small shields between, and on each side is a large canopied niche for an image. In the middle of each bay of the vault is a hole from which to suspend a lamp or candle-holder. The easternmost has smaller holes at a distance from it of about 45 inches on the north, west, and south. From it was suspended the "hanging lampe copper and guylte" mentioned in the inventory. This no doubt bore the taper which the sacrist's account for 1493-4 mentions as burning continually in capella beate Marie prope martirium sancti Thome.

The probable arrangement of the chapel as described above is shewn in the plan of the north transept and its surroundings on page 147.

XII. INVENTORY OF PLATE, ORNAMENTS, AND VESTMENTS LEFT IN THE CATHEDRAL CHURCH OF CANTER-BURY AFTER THE SUPPRESSION OF
THE MONASTERY. DATED 10TH APRIL
1540 (31 HENRY VIII.).

THE monastery of Christchurch, Canterbury, was the last of the great religious houses to be suppressed by Henry VIII. A Commission dated 20th March 31 Henry VIII. (1540) was directed to Thomas Cranmer, the archbishop, Sir Richard Rich, chancellor of the Court of Augmentations, Sir Christopher Hales, master of the Rolls, and six others, empowering them to receive the surrender of the prior and convent, to take an inventory of all the goods, plate, jewels, etc. of the monastery, and to convey to the master of the Jewel House at the Tower all the valuables and treasure they should receive. The actual deed of surrender has not come to light, but an undated list made at the time gives the names of fifty-three monks, including the prior "of the late Monastery of Chryst-Church in Canterborn," and a second list contains the names of twenty-five of these "late Religious Persons of the House of Christ-Church in Canterbury, which ben appointed to depart the same House with the Yearly Pensions assigned and allotted to every of them the IVth Day of April, Anno XXXI. Hen. VIII."<sup>1</sup> The remaining twenty-eight monks became members of the new collegiate foundation which replaced the prior and convent, six being appointed prebendaries, nine "peticanons,"<sup>1</sup> nine scholars, and two choristers. Six other prebendaries, not monks, were also appointed, and the total number of twelve formed, with their head, Nicholas Wotton, the new Dean and Chapter. The College was subsequently formally incorporated by letters patent dated 8th April 32 Henry VIII. (1541).

Whether or no any inventory of the plate, ornaments and goods of the church and monastery, other than that under notice, was taken does not appear. At any rate no such document has yet come to light. The great shrine of St. Thomas had been destroyed under the direction of Wriothesley and Pollard early in September 1538,<sup>2</sup> and its enormous riches swept into the royal treasury. No list of these, unfortunately, has been preserved. No doubt the other memorials of St. Thomas, the corona or caput, the cuspidi gladii, and the tumba in the crypt, shared the fate of the shrine at the same time. In the absence of any inventory or other record it is impossible to say what happened to the other shrines, of St. Ælphege, St. Dunstan, and St. Blase, or to the many relics of the Saxon archbishops.

From the famous "scrutiny" of St. Dunstan's shrine made in 1508<sup>3</sup> it seems to have been a marble tomb covering the coffin of the archbishop, which lay, and probably still lies, beneath the level of the pavement. The fellow shrine of St. Ælphege no doubt exactly resembled it, and each had an altar attached thereto. These tombs were in all probability undisturbed in 1538, for their altars were certainly in existence when the inventory under notice was made in 1540.

The shrine of St. Blase, which was a mere coffer with his bones, and the divers shrines of the Saxon archbishops placed on the perches above or before the various altars, may have remained until the Suppression, but it is more likely that they were despoiled, together with the contents of the great relic cupboard, with the shrine and other memorials of St. Thomas in 1538.

All the altars, except of course that attached to the shrine of St. Thomas, which was removed with it, and the one in the Martyrdom, seem to have been left alone.

The inventory under notice is one of great interest and importance. As the heading tells us, it is an "Inventarye of Plate Ornament<sup>e</sup> vestment<sup>e</sup> and other utensiles . . . apointed and lefte to remayne" in the church by the royal commissioners appointed to take the surrender of the monastery "to his graces use" and committed to the charge of four of the newly appointed prebendaries who had succeeded the Benedictine convent, "to be saufely kepte and ordered there untill the king<sup>e</sup> highnes plesure be further declared and knowen in that bihalf."

It is written on an indented roll of parchment, 10 inches wide and 11 feet  $3\frac{3}{4}$  inches long, composed of five membranes sewn together, which measure respectively 27,  $28\frac{1}{4}$ ,  $28\frac{3}{4}$ ,  $28\frac{1}{2}$ , and  $29\frac{3}{8}$  inches in length. The inventory is written on one side only, in a clear and distinct hand, and is very free from alterations and erasures. Affixed to the back of the heading is a draft of the heading itself written on paper, and entitled: "The tytyle of an Inventarie of the ornam<sup>te</sup> &c of Cant Church taken by the Comyssiō<sup>ns</sup> at the Dissolucon." It seems from this that the inventory before us is the only one that was taken.

There is also preserved a paper copy of this inventory, of eight leaves, written in a neat early seventeenth century hand, with marginal references from (i) the original and (ii) some other copy. These references, which are distinguished by C for "Copy" and O for "Original," have been duly noticed in our transcript of the original. The copy does not include the original heading, nor the signatures of the commissioners. It also does not strictly follow the original spelling and there are several deviations from the order in which the items occur.

Both the original inventory and the copy are in the possession of the Dean and Chapter.

The inventory is written throughout in English. Like the one of 1315-16 it is divided into sections, but these are grouped under two main headings as follows :

- |   |                                       |
|---|---------------------------------------|
| I. Plate and Jewels [181].                                  | (viii) Cushions [190].                |
| II. The Vestry stuff [183].                                 | (ix) Carpets for the church [191].    |

| (iiii) Albes [188].   | (xiii) Ornaments for the Quire [191]. |
| (v) Stoles and fanons [189].                                | (xiv) Warham's Chapel [192].          |
| (vi) Fronts and pendants for altars, and statecloths [189]. | (xv) The Lady Chapel [193].           |
| (vii) Altar cloths [190].                                   | (xvi) Arundel's Chapel [193].         |
|   | (xvii) Buckingham's Chapel [194].     |

For convenience of reference the numbers are here appended of the pages of the present work in which they are printed.

The section dealing with the plate is a somewhat short one as compared with the long list of the earlier inventory, and possibly a large number of things which ought to have appeared in it, especially those of gold, were reserved "for the king's use"; it is nevertheless of considerable interest. The first three items shew that the splendid pyx and the magnificent silver-gilt table of the high altar obtained when Chillenden was prior (1390-1—1411)<sup>1</sup> still retained their places. The other items specify the mitres, crosses, censers, basons, chalices and patens, cruets, candlesticks, etc. many of which are probably identical with those in use in 1315-16. Thus the "ij crewett<sup>e</sup> of byrell garnissed in the toppe with sylver gilte" are doubtless two of the quatuor urcioli de cristallo; the "ij Sensers called the principall sensers gilte w<sup>t</sup> white chenes" may be the duo Thurribula magna argentea deaurata; and the "iij faire pott<sup>e</sup> for halowed oyle the one of them gylte" correspond with the tres ampulle Maiores. unde j. deaurata. Many other possible identifications are evident on comparison.

On the whole it will be seen that the church was left fairly well supplied with plate.

The same remark also applies with regard to the copes and vestments. Of copes no fewer than two hundred and sixty-two are enumerated, including sets of fifty, forty-five, twenty-eight, sixteen and fifteen. This is more than double the number, one hundred and twenty-nine, in 1315-16.

Of suits of vestments, that is for priest, deacon, and subdeacon, over thirty are specified, and twenty-seven chasubles with their albes, etc. are described as being in the south aisle, that is of the quire, probably in a press there.

Of albes there were one hundred and thirty-two. The first twelve were of an elaborate character, most of them being of silk or sarcenet with richly embroidered apparels, and with amices of equally splendid work. The remainder are grouped according to the colour of their apparels; the amices worn with them are doubtless included under the title of albe. The last entry, which describes the quotidian albes (i.e. those in daily use) as being kept "in thinner and utter vestry," is of interest as shewing that the ancient chapel of St. Andrew and the treasury beyond or within it continued to be used as the outer and the inner vestry respectively.

It is evident from the mention in the list of fronts and pendants for altars that the high altar was still flanked by "the side aulters" of St. Ælphege and St. Dunstan, and we shall find later that the "nether fronts" of copper gilt belonging to them were also retained.

In the same way we learn from the list of altar cloths, which describes four as "in the North Ile" and the like number as "in the South Ile," that the altars in the quire transepts, namely of St. Martin and St. Stephen, St. John and St. Gregory were undisturbed.

The lists of cushions and carpets call for no special remark. It may, however, be noticed that the prior's seat, which was the first of the returned stalls on the north side next the quire door, had a tapestry carpet. The last item of the next sub-section is a canopy of baudekyn and gold "to hange over the busshope." It is uncertain whether this was a canopy for the archbishop's seat at the east end of the southern row of stalls, or for his own stall, which was and still is the first of the returned stalls on the right of the quire door.

The subsection "Curteyns," though it only contains three items, mentions two points of interest. Seven pairs of curtains were "in the grete vestuary." This place, as already noted, was the chapel of St. Andrew, on the north side of the presbytery. The "vaute" wherein lay the rich sarcenet curtains was the vaulted chamber beneath the steps leading up from the old place of the high altar to the archbishop's stone chair behind and above it.

The interesting list of "hoses & showes" which are included under the title "Sendallē" should be compared with that in the inventory of 1315-16. This has under the heading Sandalia, three embroidered pairs, of which one was white, another red, and the third blue, a description which agrees closely with three out of four items here noted.

The list of "Ornamentē for the Quayre" is perhaps the most interesting section of the inventory. It enumerates, though not in order, (1) divers sets of hangings, (2) carpets, (3) the Lent cloths, and (4) various pieces of furniture, such as candlesticks, desks, etc.

The sets of hangings, which were four in number, were probably for suspension over the stalls on either side the quire. Three were apparently embroidered: one with the story of St. Ælphege, the second with "old Imagerie of the passyon of Christe," the third likewise with "imagerie." The fourth set is described as "one faire new hanging of riche tapestrie" consisting of six pieces, with the story of Christ and Our Lady. Three of these were clearly the tres pannos pulcherimos opere de arysse subtiliter intextos ortum virginis cum vita et obitu ejusdem clare et splendide configurantes given by prior Thomas Goldston to hang on the south side of the quire. The other three no doubt shewed forth the story of Christ, and were the gift of Richard Dering, cellarer, in 1511, as we learn from the description of them given by Somner, in whose time (1640) all six pieces of tapestry were still in use :

To begin with the Hangings setting forth the whole story both of our Saviour's Life and Death. They were given, one part of them by Prior Goldstone, and the other by Richard Dering the Church-Cellarer, in Henry VIII. days. Witness these several Memorials legible in the bordure of the Hangings. [Footnote] On the South-side, Thomas Goldstone hujus ecclesiæ Prior sacræque Theologiæ Professor me fieri fecit. Anno Dom. Millesimo quingentesimo undecimo. On the North-side, Richardus Dering hujus ecclesiæ Commonachus & Celerarius me fieri fecit. Anno Dom. Millesimo quingentesimo undecimo.<sup>1</sup>

The first of the carpets specified, an old hanging "of vj pecç of ostriche fethers to laye on the grounde on palme sondaye," no doubt once formed part of the eight costers bequeathed by Edward, prince of Wales, in 1376, of black tapestry with ostrich feathers. It is possible that this "old hanging" was now used in place of the pannus niger cum albis leonibus pro festo palmarum of the inventory of 1315-16.

The other two carpets were figured with the story of Esther. As they are described as "all broken" they must have been of some antiquity, or sore worn.

The Lent stuff included twenty cloths to cover images, a great cloth stained for the high altar and a painted Judas Cloth, the rood cloth, and a cloth to draw before the high altar. Of these the "grete Lynen cloth steyned for the high aulter" is probably identical with the magnus pannus cum toto apparatu ad cooperiendum summum altare et altaria Sanctorum Elphegi et Dunstani depictus cum historia xl<sup>me</sup> which is entered among prior Chillenden's acquisitions. The cloth "to drawe before the high aulter" was the Lenten veil. This was hung across the presbytery in line with the western face of the eastern pillars of the crossing. The iron socket for the pulley, with the outline of a castle, still remains in the pillar on the south side, where the canopy of archbishop Kemp's tomb has prevented it being taken out; a newly inserted stone marks the place of the other socket on the north side. The rood cloth, as its name implies, was used during Lent to veil "the grete Rode covered with Sylver" which is also mentioned in the list before us. This rood, which can hardly be identical with the great rood at the east end of the nave, in all probability stood upon the beam ultra magnum altare described in the inventory of 1315-16, as the depository of various reliquaries. Such a rood surmounted the high altar of Westminster Abbey, and is depicted in the well-known obit-roll of abbot John Islip (ob. 1522) in the possession of the Society of Antiquaries.<sup>1</sup> The "Judas cloth" was probably that used to cover the cross upon the altar during Lent.

Although the places of the "grete hanging basen of copper and gylt" and the "iij hanging baseins of Latein w<sup>t</sup> cheynes" are not specified, it is reasonable to suppose that they were hung in a group before the high altar in the same way as those described in Rites of Durham:

Before the High Altar, within the Quire above mentioned, were three marveilous faire silver BASINS hung in chaines of silver; one of them did hange in the south side of the Quire, above the stepps that go upp to the High Altar, the second on the north side opposite to the first, the third, in the midst, betweene them both, and just before the High Altar. Theise three silver basons had lattin basons within them, haveinge pricks for serges, or great wax candles, to stand on, the lattin basons beinge to receive the drops of the candles, which did burne continually, both day and night, in token that the House was alwayes watchinge to God.

There was also another silver bason, which did hang in silver chains before the Sacrament of the foresaid High

Altar, but ncrer to the High Altar than the other three, as almost dependenge or hanginge over the priests back, which was only lighted in time of masse and ther after extinguished.<sup>1</sup>

Among archbishop Arundel's gifts at Canterbury were tria baccilia argentea ante summum altare pendencia.<sup>2</sup> These are not mentioned in the inventory under notice, but if argentea is equivalent to argentata, the silver plating may have been worn off and the tria baccilia argentea have become "iij baseins of Latein."

Of the various candlesticks, the "grete candelsticke of copper and gilte" was probably that on which stood the "grete pascall maste," mentioned lower down in the list. The Sacrist's account for 1508-9 has a memorandum quod per estimacionem remanet super le Sedebrasse Treybrasse et super alia Candelabra in ecclesia. lviij libras cere. These may be the names of the branched candlesticks in the inventory. The "deske of latein grete and large" must be identical with the analogium sive aquilam eneam given by prior Thomas Goldston II. It perhaps stood at the north end of the high altar to sing the Gospel from. The other "large deske" would be for the chanters or rulers of the choir, and stand between the stalls.

The four remaining sections of the inventory enumerate the ornaments belonging to four chapels in the church: that of archbishop Warham, the chapel of Our Lady, archbishop Arundel's chapel, and "Buckingham's Chapell."

The goods of the four altars in the chapels in the quire transepts appear to be included in the general contents of the inventory, as are perhaps those of the altar of the Holy Cross in the nave. The inventory however says nothing of the altars in the crypt nor of the ornaments of St. Michael's chapel, of the chapel of St. Peter and St. Paul (otherwise of St. Anselm), or of the altar of the Holy Trinity in the round chapel at the east end of the church. As however these last were not chantry altars it is possible that their ornaments are included in the general inventory. But in addition to the chapels which are mentioned we should certainly have expected two others. One of these is the charming little chapel which still remains to the north of and opposite to the tomb of king Henry IV. and queen Joan, wherein an altar was dedicated in 1439 in honour of Edward the Confessor.<sup>1</sup> The other was built in 1447 by dame Joan Brenchley, widow of Sir William Brenchley, Justice of the Common Pleas, who had licence to found a chantry at the altar of St. John Baptist, and in a chapel infra corpus ejusdem (ecclesie) in muro lateris sui australis sub quarta fenestra versus orientem predictum altare sancti Johannis Baptiste canonice erigere et illud ibidem per spacium inter duas posituras sive Butteracias in longitudine et interiorem partem muri illius ac exteriorem partem positurarum sive butteraciarum predictam in latitudine cum quadam capella in honore sancti Johannis Baptiste fundanda decenter includere.<sup>2</sup>

This altar was dedicated, according to Stone, in 1448, in honour of the Holy Trinity, the blessed Virgin Mary and St. John Baptist.<sup>3</sup> The chapel was pulled down at the end of the last century.

The history and ornaments of "Warhams Chapell" and of "Our Ladie Chapell" have already been noticed in connexion with earlier documents referring to these chapels.<sup>4</sup>

Of Arundel's chapel we know but little. Among the muniments of the Dean and Chapter is the foundation deed, dated 12th December 1411, of archbishop Thomas <sup>1</sup> 1439. "Item hoc anno primo die mensis Marcij dominus Episcopus Roffensis dedicavit altare in honore sancti Edwardi regis et confessoris in capella que est ex parte Boriali ad fferetrum Sancti Thome." C.C.C.C. Parker MS. 417. f. 24.

<sup>2</sup> Register S. f. 171. The deed is also printed in full in Literæ Cantuarienses (Rolls' Series 85), iii. 193-195.

Arundel of a chantry of two secular chaplains founded by him in oratorio nostro in navi sive in corpore nostre sancte metropolitane Cantuariensis ecclesie. The royal licence, which is recited in the document, describes the chantry as founded in quadam capella dicte ecclesie Christi Cantuariensis per prefatum archiepiscopum de novo constructa.<sup>1</sup> The archbishop's will, dated 12th February 1413-14, a week before his death, commends his soul to God and the Blessed Virgin, and to SS. Gregory, Augustine, Dunstan, Thomas, Blase and Ælphege, and directs his body to be buried

In monumento [sic] meo novo. quod ad hoc licet indignissime construi. et fieri feci. in navi sancte Cantuariensis ecclesie infra Cantariam meam perpetuam. duorum capellanorum inibi ordinatam. Et volo quod executores mei perficiant et compleant ipsam cantariam meam et ordinacionem ejusdem cicius quam poterunt post mortem meam. Si contingat me decedere antequam per me perfecta fuerit et completa.<sup>2</sup>

It is clear from these documents that archbishop Arundel's chapel was in the nave, that it was begun by him in or before 1411, but left unfinished at the time of his death, and that he was buried within it. This last fact is borne out by the 16th century list of archbishops and priors which states that Arundel was buried in navi ecclesie in capella ab eo fundata.<sup>3</sup> Where the chapel actually stood is uncertain. Leland mentions among the "high Tumbes of Bishops" that "be in the Body of the Chirche": "Arundel under a Piller on the North Side. King Henry the 4. and he helped to build up a good part of the Body of the Chirch."<sup>4</sup> Somner writing in 1640 says of Arundel and his chapel:

He lieth buried (as his Table will shew) on the North-side of the Body of Christ-Church, where doubtless he sometime had a far better Monument than now remains of him. For his Will appoints out his Burial thus: in his Monument, built by him in his Chapel, in the Nave of the Church, &c. But Chantry and Monument are both gone, a bare Grave-stone levelled with the floor, with the Brass all shamefully torn away being only left; whereas you may know there sometime stood a Chapel . . . wherein both the Archbishop lay fairly intombed, and his two Chanterists did daily celebrate. . . . The Chapel (as I learn from the report of the Chantry-Priest thereof) was taken down, and sold away by Hen. VIII. his Commissioners.<sup>1</sup>

An examination of the buttresses flanking the third window from the south porch will shew that they are arranged differently from those right and left of them, and inside the church the window jambs are carried down to the floor as if there had once been an entrance below the window. Despite Leland's statement it is possible that Arundel's chapel was built outside this window, between the buttresses, with a stone screen between it and the church. As the archbishop was a great benefactor to the new nave, provision for his chapel might have been made while the work was in progress, which would account for the differences in the buttresses.

The inventory of the chapel mentions a "table" or reredos of ivory, five suits of vestments, three frontals and a diaper cloth for the altar, a corporas case, and a massbook of parchment with silver clasps. A chalice and other necessary articles were no doubt borrowed from some other chapel or altar.

The last chapel mentioned in the inventory is that of John of Buckingham, formerly dean of Lichfield and archdeacon of Buckingham, who was consecrated bishop of Lincoln on 25th June 1363. In 1397 the pope wished to translate him to Lichfield, but he preferred to resign, and retired to Canterbury, where he died on 10th March 1397-8, after a sojourn of twenty-four weeks. By his will, which is dated 9th February 1397-8 in quodam

manso vulgaritir Meistr' Omers nuncupato, bishop John of Buckingham desires to be buried in navi ecclesie Cantuariensis in loco illo deorsum ubi dominus Archiepiscopus Cantuariensis qui pro tempore fuerit vel in ejus absencia Prior ejusdem ecclesie in processionibus generalibus stacionem fuerit consuetam.<sup>1</sup>

In accordance with the bishop's wishes a chantry was subsequently founded by his executors, by deed dated 12th December 1433, in quadam capella juxta tumbam ejusdem patris defuncti et ubi corpus ejusdem jacet humatum.<sup>2</sup>

The chapel is spoken of elsewhere in the document as in navi ecclesie Cathedralis.

Bishop Buckingham's monumental slab with the remains of his brass was in existence when Somner wrote in 1640, and it seems to have lain undisturbed, until the repaving of the nave in the last century, in the middle of the seventh bay,<sup>3</sup> nearly in line with the procession door from the cloister; in the place in fact where the archbishop might have stood in the Sunday procession during the station before the Rood, as directed in the bishop's will.

As the endowments both of Arundel's and Buckingham's chantries were swept away at the suppression of the monastery, their chapels no doubt met with the same fate, and so have left no traces of their existence. The contents of Buckingham's chapel were meagre enough, consisting merely of a chalice and two old vestments.

The Canterbury copy of the Inventory is signed by six of the commissioners: "T. Cantuariensis," i.e. the

XIII. INVENTORIES TAKEN ABOUT THE TIME OF THE METROPOLITICAL VISITATION IN 1563.

AFTER the taking of the inventory of 1540, the goods of the church of Canterbury were hardly allowed a moment to remain unmolested. The clause "until the kinges highnes plesure be further declared and knowen in that bihalf"<sup>1</sup> was no mere lawyer's superfluity of words, but it gave a real power to the king of taking from the church of Canterbury whatever moved his fancy. Accordingly, in the margin of the inventory of 1540, "one faire cheyer"<sup>2</sup> is marked as delivered to the Treasurer of the Augmentations for the use of the king. Now in the Bodleian Library there is preserved a list of some of the goods taken from suppressed monasteries, and delivered to the king, about the year 1540. Among them are goods from Christchurch, Canterbury, and there can be little doubt that the "one faire cheyer" just mentioned is the same chair as that given over to the king on the 27th day of April, 1540, the same month as that in which the inventory of Christchurch was taken. In the Bodleian manuscript it is described as follows :

a Chair of woode couered w<sup>t</sup> crymsen veluet. and the pomells and handells therof garnished with siluer, parcell of suche stuffe as came frome Canterberye.<sup>3</sup>

Some other items marked in the inventory of 1540 as lacking may be traced with more or less certainty

<sup>1</sup> See above, p. 181.

amongst these goods of suppressed religious houses delivered to the king. The "ij myters sett wth perles"<sup>1</sup> may be identified with "two Myters garnished with siluer and gilte and sett with dyuerse counterfett stones and perles." If the weight corresponded, the "ij candlestickes white wth yron in them cvi oz." might be identified with "a peir of church Candellsticks of siluer parcell gilte. over and besids twoo bolts of yron in theym weinge xlvi oz. poiz a hundred twentie and seven unces," delivered the 26th day of February, 1539-40. The "chalice gilte," weighing 26 oz. from Christchurch, Canterbury, delivered on the 27th day of April, 1540, may be one of the two chalices and patens weighing 23 oz. and noted as lacking in the inventory.<sup>2</sup> Also "a sconnse with an handle of siluer," delivered the same day, may be the "one sconce wth a sticke to bere the Candell on Candlemas day."

Besides these scattered items, there exists in the Public Record Office the following inventory of other plunder delivered to the Treasurer of the Augmentations:

Witnesse Nh Bristow [notarial mark]<sup>1</sup>

Some of the items in this list can be identified with items in the inventory of 1540. One is the "staff of Thomas Becketes," which was delivered to the king on April the 27th, 1540. This entry, however, has been struck out. But the "one faire combe of golde set w<sup>t</sup> precious stones," and weighing eight ounces and a half, can without much hesitation be identified with the "Combe of golde garnishede with small turquases and other course stones, weinge with the stones eight unces di." delivered to the king before the 26th of June, 1540.<sup>2</sup> The ten copes of gold no doubt belong to the set of fifty of Cardinal Morton's gift. The "one coope of golde bawdekyn w<sup>t</sup> red rooses" is most likely that described in the inventory as "one cope of red golde baudekyn wth orpheras embroudered," against which is written "Mr. North," the name of the Treasurer of the Augmentations.

In the inventory of 1540 there are in the margin of many items of plate and jewels the words: 'C' Lack.' which have been added after the making of the inventory. The appearance of these notes may be explained by the following orders from the Privy Council:

1547. xxiii Octobris.

Whereas it was signified to the Lord Protectour's Grace and Counsayle that the Vice Deane and Chaptre of Christ's Church in Canturbury, after this last Visitacion, had taken downe and owt of the Church there certen juelles of gold and sylver, intending to have converted the same into money, order was given to Sir Anthony Aucher, knight, by his Graces letters, to repayre thider to have understanding of the same. Whereupon the same Sir Anthony went thider accordingly, and having inquired and learned that they had taken owt of the Church a pix of gold and a crucifix of sylver, the same crucifix being already converted in to money and the pix remaining yet intier and wholl, he brought to the Lordes Protectour's Grace and of the rest of the Counsaile the sayd pix, being accompanied of M<sup>r</sup> Ponett one of the sayd Chaptre; which Ponet being by his Grace and their Lordships examined the cause of their intent of taking out of the Church the sayd pix and crucifix, made answer to have made money of them to have bene employed uppon reparacion of their hous. Whereupon order and charge was given to him to receive the sayd pix again, being garnished with perles and stones countrefaicted, and wayeng xxxvj oz. di., and not only to kepe the same in their hous without altering it, conveyeng it awaye, selling or disposing it to any other use then to remane there intier, safe, and holl, as it was then in forme and being afore his Grace and their Lordships; but also that they shuld kepe the money being made of the sayd crucifix in as safe maner as the sayd pix, not converting the same to any use, which money amounteth to ——— after the rate of ——— oz., every once being sold to ——— for ———

The interval between the inventory of 1540 and that of 1563 was full of political and religious changes, but we have little documentary evidence of these changes in inventories of Christchurch, Canterbury.<sup>1</sup> It is not until the time of the metropolitical visitation of Dr. Matthew Parker, archbishop of Canterbury, in 1563, that lists are taken of the ornaments left in the church. Of these there are five lists, all clearly proceeding from one source, and all dealing with the ornaments found in Christchurch, Canterbury, about the time of this metropolitical visitation. These lists of goods have been marked respectively A, B, C, D, and E, for convenience of reference. They all come from Canterbury.

These documents may be described as follows :

A is the document which has been printed at length first of all. It would seem to be one of the first of the rough copies of the inventory from which the others have been directly or indirectly copied. It is of paper, an indenture 5 feet long and  $6\frac{1}{2}$  inches broad; formed of four leaves, nearly equal in length, each about 15 inches long, and sewn together. It has no heading. The inventory covers the recto and is continued on to the verso, while the surface of the verso unoccupied by the inventory is taken up with a rough draft of certain answers to visitation articles, which for present purposes have been neglected.

Those items which can with some amount of certainty be traced in the inventory of 1540 we have marked by an obelus prefixed to them.

B has been collated with A, of which it seems to be a fair copy, and the variations are noted at the foot of the page. It is a paper roll exactly 3 yards in length and  $6\frac{5}{8}$  inches in breadth, made up of eight leaves, each between 14 and 15 inches long, except the last, which is only 5 inches long. They are sewn together. On the verso of the first leaf is written in a modern hand: "Vestments, etc. found in the 1st year of Eliz<sup>h</sup>. This is the fair copy of which the first part of the roll is the draft." Across the end of this is written in an eighteenth century hand: "An inventory of vestm<sup>ts</sup>, etc."

C is a fragment; it is of paper and gives only the beginning of the inventory, not more than the first thirty items. It is 15 inches long and  $6\frac{1}{4}$  broad. On verso is written in a modern hand: "Inventory of plate, etc. no date." C has been collated with A, and the variants given in the footnotes.

D appears to be an official document. It is introduced with a statement that it is an inventory of all such ornaments as remain in the custody of the Treasurer of Christchurch. D has been collated with A, and the variants given at the foot of the page; and it has also been printed separately, as its interest and importance seem to justify such special treatment. It is a paper indenture, and is a long roll like B, composed of five leaves sewn together, exactly 3 yards in length and  $7\frac{3}{4}$  inches in breadth. Each leaf is a little under 22 inches in length. The head and margin of the first leaf are much torn. On the verso is written in a modern hand: "Part of an inventory of the church vestments." In the margin and elsewhere another hand has gone over D, and marked it with circlets, dots, and numbers. These last would appear to correspond with the numbers which the Treasurer of the day found actually in his custody. These numbers often agree with those given in a fragment which has been marked E, and the circlets and dots often mark items which are to be found in the diminished inventory given by E.

E is a fragment apparently of an inventory later than D. It is one leaf only out of the middle of an inventory, written on paper 14 inches long and 8 broad.

It is much torn, and has been backed with modern paper. Such of it as remains is here printed.

Passing on to compare the inventory of the metropolitical visitation with that taken in 1540, we find a diminution of the goods of the church on almost every point. The five chalices of 1563 represent eight in the inventory of 1540<sup>1</sup>; and, of these five, only three survive to the last of the visitation inventories, because two had been made into a communion cup, with a cover of silver.

It is quite possible that this change may have been made in consequence of an answer made by one George Gardyner, a prebendary of the church, to the articles of this metropolitical visitation. It was inquired "whether your divine service be used, and your sacraments ministred, in maner and forme prescribed by the Quenes Majesties Injunctions, and none other way," and again "whether you have necessary ornaments and books of your church."<sup>2</sup> George Gardyner replies<sup>3</sup> to the first in the affirmative, "saving that the communion, as he saith, is ministred in a chalice, contrary, as he saith, to the Advertisements of the Quene."<sup>4</sup> Later on he suggests that "their chalice [be] turned into a decent communion cupp." The "decent communion cupp" does not appear in the first drafts of the inventory of the

<sup>4</sup> The Injunctions of Queen Elizabeth, published in her first year, do not say anything about turning the chalice into a decent communion cup (H. Gee and W. J. Hardy, Documents illustrative of English Church History, London, 1896, p. 417). But the title of No. xxviii. of Archbishop Parker's Articles drawn out by certain, and were exhibited to be admitted by authority, but not so allowed, is "Chalices to be altered to Decent Cups." According to Strype, these articles are of the year 1562 (Annals of the Reformation, Oxford, 1824, vol. i. part i. p. 507, and part ii. p. 564). In 1564 amongst variations of ceremonial it is noted: "Some with chalice; some with a Communion cup; others with a common cup." (Strype, Life and Acts of Matthew Parker, Oxford, 1821, vol. i. p. 302.)

metropolitical visitation, A and B, but it is added to the later lists, C and D.

The "ij crewettes gilte, the one lacking a Cover,"<sup>1</sup> in 1540 are probably represented by the "ij cruettes of sylver and gylte without covers" of 1563. The censers of silver of A, interlined in this inventory, and not appearing again, are most likely "the principall sensers gilte with white cheynes" of 1540.<sup>2</sup> The nine girdles remind us of the "ix corse girdelles"<sup>3</sup> that are noted as lacking in the list of 1540. Both items were garnished with silver, and are the same in number.

The next items cannot so well be identified. The banner of "my Lord Cardinal's gift" (if that be Cardinal Pole) would be new, and some of these other neighbouring items may be new also. In 1540 twenty pendants remained.<sup>4</sup> The pectoral set with pearl is no doubt the "one pectorall with a pellicane of perl" in 1540.<sup>5</sup> The "one riche hersecloth of blacke and white golde baudekyn" of 1540 also remains.<sup>6</sup> There is an increase of the corporas cases from eight in 1540<sup>7</sup> to twelve in 1563, though there were only seven corporas cloths in 1563.

The cushions in 1563 seem more in number than in 1540, being forty-eight in the later date and thirty-nine in the earlier. The Lenten cloths of 1540<sup>8</sup> are some of them reproduced in 1563; amongst them are the veil, the stained cloth for the high altar, the cross cloth, and cloths to draw over the high altar. They were sold in 1570.<sup>9</sup>

Of curtains in 1540 there seem to have been nine pairs, while in 1563 there were eleven. The curtains in 1540 are very shortly described, so that it is not easy to identify all with those of 1563, of which the two first items of "goodnestones gyfte" and "deringes" seem to correspond with the gift of Prior Thomas Goldston and Richard Dering.<sup>1</sup> They are specially marked in D, as if they had been taken care of. The marks "M. S." on the two pairs of curtains, red and white, are most likely the initials of the donor.

The copes in the inventory of 1563 are all conveniently classed under their colours, not, as in 1540, put together without any arrangement. The inventory is thus easier to follow.

Of the white copes, which in 1540 were close upon one hundred, only fifteen remain; and of the fifty copes remaining in 1540, reduced by ten immediately after,<sup>2</sup> of Cardinal Morton's original gift of eighty,<sup>3</sup> there remain in the first rough draft of 1563 ten, which seem to have fallen to four soon after the writing of the last draft. The copes with Jesse,<sup>4</sup> archangels,<sup>5</sup> "burres,"<sup>6</sup> and columbines,<sup>7</sup> can all be recognised in the inventory of 1540.

In 1540 there were over fifty green copes, while in 1563 only eight remain. Like the white, these can all be traced in the inventory of 1540.<sup>8</sup>

There was much the same number, fifty, of red copes in 1540, and seventeen remain in 1563. These are not so easy to identify with those described in 1540. The last item, "with lyons and orpheras needlewourke," is probably that of 1540, "with Lyons of golde," and the last but one, "with starres and byrdes," that with "sterres and Images embroudered.”<sup>1</sup> There is another with vines and orphreys embroidered, most likely the same as that of “vyne leves of golde.”<sup>2</sup> The first item, two copes of cloth of gold with pomegranates and roses and pearl, may be the “ij copes of crymsyn golde baudekyn very riche with orpheras embroudered.”<sup>3</sup> For the other items amongst the red copes there do not seem grounds for hazarding an identification.

Of the blue copes, thirty-seven in number in 1540, there survived no less than twenty in 1563. Of these, five items can be identified with a good approach to likelihood.

In 1540 there were at least forty “vestments,” but in 1563 only eight chasubles survived. Each chasuble has its match in a pair of tunicles in the following section. The first item, the chasuble of cloth of gold, set with pearl, has its match among the tunicles, which are said to be red cloth of gold, also with pomegranates and roses, and so on through the rest. All the four or five liturgical colours, white, red, green, blue, and black, are represented.

In the later inventory, to which we assign the symbol D, we find four more chasubles, two of which, the chasuble with hinds and that made of blue velvet with circles and roses, can be made to match with the tunicles. As there are only ten tunicles, the remaining two chasubles in D must have been without tunicles. There is mention of the green cope of copper gold that in A and B is being made into a chasuble.

Six of these “vestments” of 1540 can be identified with those of 1563. The first item of 1563 corresponds with the second item of 1540; the blue chasuble with circles of gold and roses of D corresponds with the third item of 1540, that with griffins to the fourth item. The white velvet chasuble with burrs and the green velvet chasuble with fleurs-de-lys are also to be found in 1540.

In 1540 there were fifty-two albs “quotidians” and

"mean"; in 1563 there were thirty-five albs without apparels. Of the apparelled albs in 1540 there were thirty-one rich albs of blue set down in this way without further description;<sup>1</sup> in 1563 there were eleven of blue, with a description of each of the items. So with the red apparels: in 1540 there are thirty-six albs "garnisshed with redde," all set down under one head; in 1563 there are ten, severally enumerated. In 1540 there were seventeen albs with green velvet and silk, in 1563 only three apparelled with green. The white apparels are treated at length in both years. Only seven white remained in 1563. For the choristers there remained nine albs "apparellyd perfectlye."

After the albs in 1563 comes a sort of general inventory of those items that had been omitted under their proper heads, or could not be conveniently classed elsewhere. There are two pyx cloths and one pyx, a number of candlesticks, two pairs of laten censers and two ships, a holy water stock, pewter pots for the holy oils, and cloths of silk for these pots or amples. The colours for these cloths correspond with those given in a Rouen mass-book written in the thirteenth century.<sup>2</sup>

In D there is, at this part, mention of "foure stoles of Ieron for the rectors of y<sup>e</sup> quier," which were six in 1540.<sup>3</sup> For these there are corresponding sets of cushions, of red silk, of white, of blue arras, and gold leather.<sup>4</sup>

Of these different inventories it has been said that A appears to be the first rough list of everything contained in the church, while D is an official list from which certain ornaments contained in A have been excluded. Can we discover in the ornaments omitted in D any governing principle which determined their exclusion? Was it simply that the ornaments in question had disappeared from the church, or was it that they were there, but deliberately rejected? Of deliberate rejection we have a very remarkable instance in the ornaments given by Cardinal Pole which are set out only in D in a section by themselves, and the metal ornaments are nearly all marked "defased."<sup>1</sup> They are of the same kind as other ornaments which are retained. The candlesticks, the crosses, the censer, the mitre, the crosier, the holy water-pot, the chrismatory, marked as defaced, may all find their fellows in other parts of D, but these are apparently left whole and fit for use; such are a "crose the staff thereof wrethed with sylver,"<sup>2</sup> the candlesticks "coper and gilte," with the "sensors of latten," the "amples for oyle," the "holly water stopp of latten," and the mitre of the gift of "my Lord of Dover."<sup>3</sup> The reason for thus defacing does not lie on the surface.

It may perhaps be thought that a paragraph of an Act of Parliament of 1559 may throw light upon this rejection. It runs as follows :

Provided alwaies, and bee it enacted, That suche Orna-mentes of the Churche and of the Ministers thereof shall bee reteyned and bee in use as was in the Churche of Englande by auctorite of Parliament in the seconde yere of the Reigne of King Edwarde the Syxthe, untill other order shalbe therein taken by thauctorite of the Quenes Matie withe the advise of her Commissioners appointed and authorised under the Greate Seale of Englande for Ecclesiastical Causes, or of the Metropolitane of this Realme.<sup>4</sup>

It may be suggested that as these ornaments given by Cardinal Pole must be after the second year of King Edward VI. they are therefore rendered illegal. But the wording of the Act is "such ornaments," that is, ornaments of the same kind as those in the second year of King Edward, and thus the ornaments given by Cardinal Pole would not be excluded. Besides, the pontifical rings and the silken ornaments, such as gloves, copes, vestments, and tunicles, given by the same Cardinal, remain.

Nor does it seem that the ornaments left out in D were those which, having been in use in the second year of Edward VI. yet were not in use according to the service book of Elizabeth. Such may be said indeed of "the vanes and reedes for palme sundaye,"<sup>1</sup> which are omitted in D, if such were connected with the blessing of palms on Palm Sunday and the procession therewith; for such service had disappeared from the book of Elizabeth, and the using of palms had been also one of the first things to be forbidden by Somerset in his onslaught on ceremonies in the reign of Edward VI. viz. on January 28, 1548.<sup>2</sup> Nor would other ornaments omitted, "a towell of white linnen clothe to carry the pascall" nor "a Heade for the herse of copper and gilte to carry the iij lyghtes to the fier vppon ester euy<sup>n</sup>"<sup>3</sup> be needed for the service in the new book. There is no blessing of the paschal candle even in the first book of Edward VI. but "iij beralle stones,"<sup>4</sup> used no doubt for lighting the new fire on Easter Even, are left in D.

It seems strange to leave the beryl stones, which could be put to no use, and reject the white linen, which could be put to many other uses, in the church. In the same way there is omitted "one pyxe clothe of linnen clothe wroughte lyke a kall w<sup>t</sup> a border of golde and knoppes guylted,"<sup>5</sup> which might have been turned into a fair linen cloth if not made of network, as was sometimes the case; yet it is rejected, with "a pyxe for the sacrament copper and guilte,"<sup>6</sup> which might have been used as a paten or vessel in which to distribute the consecrated bread to the communicants; yet "a monstrant of latten to carry the sacrement in vppon Festyvall Dayes"<sup>7</sup> is retained. Nor is it easy to see why "the holly water stopp of latten" has been retained in D.<sup>8</sup>

More easy to explain is the retention of "iii pewter pottes otherwise amples for oyle"<sup>1</sup> and a "pynne of syluer to mynister balme vppon maunday thursday,"<sup>2</sup> because in the first book of Edward VI. two kinds of oil, that for the sick, and the cream, were retained, and thus the "amples" to hold the oils, and the pin for mixing the balm with olive oil to make cream, might be considered as ordered by the Act of Parliament to be retained. Holy oil or cream is still used in the consecration of the English sovereigns.<sup>3</sup>

Also retained were "ij payre of sensors of latten and j ship of latten."<sup>4</sup> Censers and ships may well have been retained for the purification of the air within a great church, and there is abundance of evidence to show that as incense was intended in the first place to sweeten the air of a building, so it was retained in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries for this same end.<sup>5</sup>

Most surprising, perhaps, of all is the survival of a <sup>5</sup> For instances of post-Reformation use of incense, see Hierurgia Anglicana (London, Ecclesiological late Cambridge Camden Society, 1848. p. 180), and it would not be a hard matter to enlarge the list. The Treasurer's accounts at Canterbury (for 1675-6. p. 67. under Officium Sacristae) have an entry: For incense at Christmas. Dom Claude de Vert (Explication . . . des Cérémonies de l'Eglise, Paris, 1713. t. iii. p. 72. t. iv. p. 49.) brings forward a number of authorities to show that incense is mainly intended to purify and perfume the places in which it is used. The dirt and filth of oriental countries and of the middle ages must not be forgotten. He quotes St. Thomas, (Summa, pars iii. quaest. 83. Artic. v. ad § 2.) Cardinal Bellarmine, (De Sacramento Eucharistiae, lib. vi. cap. 15.) and Gavanti (Thesaurus Sacrorum Rituum, pars ii. lib. iv. n. 4. Aug. Vindel. 1763. t. i. p. 184.) and he supports his opinion by pointing out that at Lyons and Vienne, where the ceremonies are very ancient, it is not the Blessed Sacrament that is censed when it is carried abroad, but the road along which it is taken. So in the procession from Westminster Hall to the Abbey Church at the coronation of the King of England, the herb-woman, scattering sweet herbs and flowers, walked at the head of the procession, while the groom of the vestry, burning incense, came later on with the choir in surplices and copes, and continued to purify the way until the choir doors were reached. (F. Sandford, History of the Coronation of . . . James II. In the Savoy, 1687. pp. 70 & 80.) Abbé Duchesne tells us that at Rome the portable censer was used only for processions up to the ninth century. The road which the procession was to follow was in this way made sweet, (L. Duchesne, Origines du Culte chrétien, Paris, 1889. p. 155. n. 1.) a precaution not unnecessary even in the streets of modern Rome.

XIV. THE INVENTORY OF 1584.

This inventory was made at the appointment of Dr. Richard Rogers, bishop of Dover, to be dean of Canterbury, and it shows the great waste that had taken place in the church ornaments between the metropolitical visitation of Dr. Matthew Parker and the coming into the deanery of the bishop of Dover. The chapter, it appears, were in want of funds to pay the inferior ministers of the church, or even to purchase armour, and there are records in 1567 and 1570 of the sale of church ornaments by vote of the chapter. For the following transcript from the chapter minutes we are indebted to Mr. Francis W. Cross, who has called attention to the interest of these documents, which suffered severely in a fire in the seventeenth century. The edge of the document from which Mr. Cross' transcript has been made has been burnt, and the burnt place is marked by the runners at the beginning of each line.<sup>1</sup>

In margin is : for copes to be solde.

The northern rising in 1569 doubtless caused the privy council to give commandment to the clergy to provide armour "according to such order and rates as were used in the time of the late King Philip and Queen Mary."<sup>3</sup>

It was also agreed :

That m<sup>r</sup> Receyvo<sup>r</sup> and m<sup>r</sup> Tresorer shall make sale of the lente clothes remaynyng in the vestrye to m<sup>r</sup> pyereson at such pryses as they shall thynke theym resonably worthe.<sup>4</sup>

But their necessity was very likely greater than that of the dean and chapter of Canterbury in 1570.

This minute, partly burnt as it is, records the intention of the chapter to make away with certain ornaments remaining to the church, if the Dean would give his consent.

It is said that inventories were to be made in 1570 by the dean, vice dean, and treasurer.<sup>3</sup> If such were made, and have survived to our times, they are not known to us at present. The archbishop's Injunctions direct, in the XVth Item, that the Dean and Prebendaries do restore to the church such goods and ornaments, as they have of their private authority taken away from the said church.<sup>4</sup>

Embezzlement, however, went on. In 1573. the archbishop visited his church again, and grave disorders came to light. Thomas Willoughby, the oldest prebendary, was suspended. Another prebendary confessed that he swore oaths and struck at his fellow prebendaries. Also the dean allowed

"that he made away the copes of the church: which he confessed, because it had been agreed by the Chapter, that all the copes should be made away, and that he had two of them, and paid fifteen pounds for the same."<sup>1</sup>

The chapter decree concerning the copes cannot have been fully carried out as it stated immediately before that:

"They had still remaining a great many old copes, which were to be disposed of as the Archbishop thought best."

But in 1584, notwithstanding the order of "reserving some of the coapes," not one is kept of the good stock left by the archbishop in 1563. There are some few of the ornaments of 1563 to be recognised. The "two lyvery pottes of Silver double gilte" may be the "ij cruettes of sylver and gylt without covers" of 1563,<sup>2</sup> or more likely the "ij standing potts made of iij Chalyses and other the church plate."<sup>3</sup> The "two bazens of Sylver parcel gylt" are very likely those from Canterbury College; the communion cup is doubtless that of 1563. The linen cloths for the communion table may possibly be those "aulter clothes of Diaper," or the "ix newe" in 1563.

"iiij iron stooles" remain, and are very likely the "foure stoles of Iron for the rectors of the quier" of 1563, and the "eagle of brasse" the "lectrone of latten, with a picture of an egle," of 1563 given by prior Thomas Goldston II.<sup>4</sup> The font has become "a Bazon of brasse for Christenyng with a foot of Iron." Formerly there was a font of silver at Canterbury, which was sent for when a child of the king was to be baptized, as the following direction shows:

*How the Churche shalbe arraied againste the Christeninge. . .
Then must the fonte of Siluer that is at Canterbury be sent* for, or els a newe fonte made of purpose, to be kepte in suche place as shall please the kinge, to serue to like vse hereafter. Or els his highness pleasure wolde be knowne, whether he will haue it done in a fonte of stone, as it hathe bene somtimes seene.<sup>1</sup>

This font may have been sent for to the king's court and retained by him. For there appears among King Henry VIII.'s jewels, under the "Holiwater Stockes of Siluer gilte parcell gilte and white w<sup>t</sup> a fonte parcell gilte," the following as the first item :

Item a fonte chased with men beastes and Fowles half gilte with a couer gilte poiz togethers CCiiij<sup>xx</sup> j oz.<sup>2</sup>

This may be the Canterbury font, but no font appears among the goods of the church up to the time of this inventory ; or it may be one of the silver fonts made on purpose at the baptism of one of the king's children.

The children of the king of Scots were baptized in a brazen font, which was brought from Edinburgh by Sir Richard Lee in 1543, and given to the church of St. Alban in Hertfordshire,<sup>3</sup> where it remained until the civil wars.<sup>4</sup>

Amongst the "Lynnynge clothes for y<sup>e</sup> Communion table" is "one Clothe wrought wth oylett wholes," an attempt at ornamentation ; and very curious also are the "iiij olde wying Clothes" which may have some relation to the modern 'purificator.'

There are some more relics of the mediæval stuffs in the "Clothes of sylke for the Communion table," crimson and green, and "spangd with gold birdes" ; the carpets and cushions and the "hanginges of Arras roonde about the Chore" are also, no doubt, some of those described in 1563. The "ii whit ones [cushions] with blacke Crosses" were no doubt for use in Lent. Also the "iij olde ones of gilt lether" are the "iij rector cusshens of golden lether" of 1563, which in the last inventory had already dropped to three. The cushions marked as "vj w<sup>t</sup> benedicta sit sancta Trinitas" must have been mediæval; for Benedicta sit sancta Trinitas is the beginning of an anthem in honour of the holy Trinity, the office of the mass De Trinitate.

Amongst the "Clothes of sylke for the Communion table" the variations of colour, crimson, green, white, and "strickd with murreye" suggest the question if these were varied according to the church season.

"A low deske in the myddest of the Chore" must have been to sing the Litany at, and we find in 1634 also "a kneeleing deske in the midst of the Quire," no doubt for the same purpose.

There are two forms delivered to the "strangers," who may very likely have been the French congregation.

Of the books, it may be noted that there are "ij bookes of martys," most probably Foxe's.

The retention of the name 'chapter house' may be noticed, because in the later inventories it is usually called 'sermon house,' by which name it went, as Gostling tells us, in 1777. This writer asserts that it was fitted up as a sermon house with pulpit, pews, and galleries in the time of Henry VIII.<sup>1</sup> but the very little furniture contained in it in 1584 throws some doubt upon his statement. And further in 1570 the visitation was held and the Eucharist celebrated in the chapter house.<sup>2</sup> Sermons were preached in it up to the eve of the great rebellion, discontinued, and then resumed.<sup>3</sup> In King James II.'s time, early morning prayers began to be said here, and continued certainly until 1777. ## XV. INVENTORY TAKEN ABOUT THE TIME OF THE METROPOLITICAL VISITATION OF 1634.

As the inventory of 1563 was no doubt caused by the metropolitical visitation of Dr. Matthew Parker, so it seems likely that the inventory of 1634 was caused by the metropolitical visitation of Dr. William Laud, who succeeded Dr. George Abbot as archbishop in 1633.<sup>1</sup> Changes in the furniture of Christchurch began at once; and a bitter enemy of the Chapter of Canterbury took care to note the changes:

A Religious and well-affected Alderman of Canterbury, gave mee lately a Transcript of a passage written with his owne hand, in a spare leafe in his great Bible, which passage I have often read, its this: Christ-tide, 1633. was the first day of the High Altar, and Candlestickes on it, and Candles in them, and other dressings very brave, in Christ-Church, Canterbury.<sup>2</sup>

A more friendly pen records of the archbishop:

He began first with Canterbury his own Cathedral, where he found the Table placed at the East end of the Choire by the Dean and Chapter, and Adoration used toward it by their appointment; as was attested upon Oath by Dr. Blechinden, one of the Prebends of that Church at the time of his trial. Which having found in so good order, he recommended to them the providing of Candlesticks, Basons, Carpet, and other Furniture for the adorning of the Altar, and the more solemn celebrating of the blessed Sacrament.<sup>3</sup>

Though the treasurer's account books at Christchurch for this period have generally not been preserved, yet the book for 1633 has survived. It is disappointing, therefore, to find in it nothing of the expenses of the office of sacrist, nor anything that shows an outlay for altar plate at this time. But the chapter itself acknowledges to the archbishop extraordinary expenses in the year before the 8th of July, 1634. This is part of its reply :

5<sup>ly</sup>. We have obeyed Your Graces directions in pulling down the exorbitant Seates within our Quire, whereby the Church is very much beautified. Lastly, wee most humbly beseech Your Grace to take notice, that many and most necessary have beene the occasions of extraordinary expenses this Yeare, for ornaments of the altar &c.

Christ Church Canterb :

8. July 1634.

This is signed by eight of the prebendaries.<sup>1</sup>

A further description of the additions to the furniture made about this time at Canterbury is given by Neal :

To make the Adoration more significant, the Altars in Cathedrals were adorned with the most pompous Furniture, and all the vessels had a solemn Consecration. The Cathedral of Canterbury was furnished, according to Bishop Andrews's Model, who took it from the Roman Missal, with two Candlesticks and Tapers, a Basin for Oblations, a Cushion for the Service Book, a Silver gilt Canister for the Wafers, like a Wicker Basket, lin'd with Cambrick Lace, the Tonne on a Cradle ; a Chalice with the Image of Christ and the Lost Sheep, and of the Wise Men and Star, engraven on the Sides and on the Cover. The Chalice was cover'd with a linen Napkin, called the Aire, embroidered with coloured Silk ; two Patins, the Tricanale being a round Ball with a screw Cover, out of which issued three Pipes, for the Water of Mixture ; a Credentia, or side Table, with a Basin and Ewer on Napkins, and a Towel, to wash before the Consecration ; three kneeling Stools covered and stuff'd, the Foot Pace with three Ascents, covered with a Turkey Carpet ; three Chairs used at Ordinations, and the Septum or Rail with two Ascents. Upon some Altars there was a Pot, called the Incense Pot, and a Knife to cut the Sacramental Bread.<sup>2</sup>

Neal's very circumstantial description of the furniture at Canterbury is not so trustworthy as at first it appears to be. It follows too closely the inventory of the furniture in Bishop Andrewes' chapel,<sup>1</sup> in the items which are particular to that chapel, and which are not to be found in the inventory of Christchurch printed below. There is a general resemblance in the possession of candlesticks and basons, cushions, hangings, desks, and service books; but the ornaments so noteworthy in the chapel of Bishop Andrewes, the silver and gilt canister for wafers, the air for covering the chalice, a name borrowed from the Easterns, the tricanale with its three pipes, the credence and the bason and ewer, the censer and ship, are all absent in this Canterbury Inventory. The 'three chairs used at Ordinations' might by an ingenious person be held to be the 'three iron Chaires' which have come down from 1540; and also at Canterbury the Holy Table stood upon a 'foot pace with three Ascents' within altar rails,<sup>2</sup> but these features are accidents, not imitations by design. It seems as likely that the chapter at Canterbury furnished their Church "according to Bishop Andrews's Model" as it is that Bishop Andrewes took his "from the Roman Missal."

About this time the chapter appear to have bought an embroidered purple velvet cloth to go behind the altar<sup>3</sup>; aided therein by a bequest to the chapter made by the duchess dowager of Lennox of a hundred pounds sterling. And Dr. Warner, bishop of Rochester, about the same time gave a new marble font, with a cover of wood. The Puritan excitement caused by these gifts may best be told in the language of the godly themselves, in a petition presented by certain citizens of Canterbury to the house of commons in 1640: of which some sections are here given.

<sup>2</sup> Richard Culmer, op. cit. p. 19. On August 26th, 1642. Colonel Sandys' zealous troopers "hewed the Altar-railes all to pieces, and threw their Altar over, and over, and over, downe the three Altar-steps."

<sup>3</sup> Antidotum Culmerianum, or Animadversions upon a late Pamphlet entituled Cathedral Newes from Canterbury, Oxford, H. Hall, 1644. 4° p. 25. Apparently there was one before, for this writer speaks of "the back-cloth upon the Screene, or Traverse being much discoloured, with age"; the prebendaries had purchased a new purple velvet cloth and repaired the decayed gold upon "the goodly piece of carved Tabernacle-worke" of the screen.

2. The Pettie Canons, and Singingmen there, sing their Cathedrall-Service in Prick-song after the Romish fashion, chaunting the Lords Prayer, and other Prayers in an unfit manner, in the Chancell, or Quire of that Cathedrall; at the East end whereof they have placed an Altar (as they call it) dressed after the Romish fashion, with Candlesticks, and Tapers, &c. for which Altar they have lately provided a most Idolatrous costly GLORY-CLOTH or Back-Cloth; towards which Altar they crouch, and duck three times at their going up to it, to reade there part of their Service apart from the Assembly.<sup>1</sup>

4. Whereas neare that Cathedrall there is a large, warme, and wel-seated Sermon-house, where (time out of mind) Sermons have beene made upon Lords dayes and Festivall dayes: Of late there hath beene a Pulpit set up in the Quire of that Cathedrall, which is a very cold and inconvenient place, and there onely the Sermon is preached on those dayes, and hemd in with their Quire Service, that all that will partake of the Sermon, should of necessitie partake of their Cathedrall-Ceremonious-Altar-Service, whereby many are driven away from hearing the Word of God, as also for want of seats, that roome not being capable of halfe that Auditory, which might, and did heare in the Sermon-House.<sup>2</sup>

6. In that Cathedrall there hath been lately erected a Superstitious Font, with three Ascents to it, paled about with high gilded, and painted iron bars, having under the cover of it, a carved Image of the Holy Ghost, in the forme of a Dove, and round about it are placed carved Images of the twelve Apostles, and foure Evangelists, and of Angels, and over it a Carved Image of Christ; so that none can looke up in prayer there, but hee shall behold those tempting Images in the place of Divine Worship; against the Law of God, and the Doctrine of the Church of England. And all this is done at the costs of Doctor [Warner] . . . Lord Bishop of Rochester &c. And that Font was consecrated by the Lord Bishop of Oxford.<sup>1</sup>

In the margin of this section there is :

consecrated by a Lord Bishop, who went round about it reading in a Booke, and went up the three steps, and put his head into the Font.

Culmer proceeds to comment on the superstitious Back cloth as follows :

Their Cathedrall-Altar-Glory-Cloth, before mentioned, was lately found out, where they had laid it in that Cathedrall, and is now in the hands of the Honorable Committe, [sic] of Parliament for demolishing of Idolatrous monuments. That Glory, which is the shame of their Cathedrall, is made of very rich Imbroydery of Gold and Silver, the name Jehovah on the top in Gold upon a cloth of Silver, and below it a semicircle of Gold, and from thence glorious rayes and clouds, and gleames and points of rayes, direct and waved, streame downewards upon the Altar, as if Jehovah (God himselve) were there present in glory, in that Cathedrall at the Altar ; and all this to draw the people to looke and worship towards the Altar, and thereby to usher in the breaiden god of Rome, and Idolatry. The large patterne of that superstitious GLORY (being made of papers pasted together, wch is now kept with the Glory) hath written on it, thus ; Is not this circle too large? if so, it may best bee mended (as wee conceive) by inlarging the golden circle at the extremities of it, and by inlarging it inward. What thinke you of working the rayes without clouds? If you can conceive it fitting, it will much lessen the charge : our feare is, the Clouds will not bee well wrought, and then the rayes will show far better without them. W. B. This was written on the patterne at London by a Cathedrall Doctor of Canterbury, as John Rowell, the Imbroiderer that made that Glory, hath lately testified upon his examination taken before the truely religious Sir Robert Harley, who, being in the Chaire of that Committee, hath (beside that Glory) such Idolatrous Popish Pictures, and other Popish trinkets taken out of the Kings Chappell, and from the Archbishop of Canterbury, and else-where, that a true Protestant would be astonished to behold them, they are so abominable ; but they are all appointed to the fire. And the said John Rowel testifieth that after the patterne was so written on, at London, it was carried to the Cathedrall at Canterbury, and there the Prebendaries met and consulted about the Glory, and then the patterne was written on there, in an answer to the former writing, thus: Wee conceive this Ovall-forme would doe better in a semicircle, and extend the Glory more on either side: These Clouds well shadowed, and well wrought, and pierced with raies will be most proper. We conceive also, that the Field should be more Azure, then Silver, which will soone tarnish. And the Imbroiderer further testifieth, that all the Prebendaries did approve of the making of that Glory for the Altar.<sup>1</sup>

Attention may now be paid to the inventory itself.

This first inventory of the seventeenth century shows a more complete break with the mediæval inventories than the last of the sixteenth. Little remains of the relics of the mediæval stuffs, canopies, carpets, and cushions, that were in existence even in 1584. There are to be noted indeed six pieces of arras, three "peices of hanginges at the high altar," the brass eagle, three out of the four iron chairs or stools for the rectors, and a desk of iron. The only cope remaining in the vestry is "a scarlett cope lyned with miniver left unto the Church by Dr. Clarck." Apparently this is that 'Richard Clarke, doctor in divinity' who, in the answer to the articles of the metropolitical visitation of 1634, is described as living in the precincts, but no member of the cathedral church.<sup>2</sup> He was, however, one of the six preachers in 1602 and he died in the year of the metropolitical visitation.<sup>3</sup> It may be noticed that seven of the prebendaries present 'the want of copes' in their answer to the visitation articles.<sup>4</sup>

"v. Chayers of clothe of tysshue" may have supplied the "three chaires of old copes" in the dean's great chamber, especially as one seems to have been transplanted already in 1584.

Of the plate in the stillitories and undercroft, the two flagons, the two cups with their covers, the two silver basons, and the two great candlesticks would seem to be new, so also the silver chalice double gilt with two plates added to the inventory. According to Mr. Scott Robertson's account, none of these of 1634 can be found at the present moment at Canterbury, as none of the plate there is earlier than 1636.<sup>1</sup> It seems likely, however, that the two great candlesticks may be those described in this inventory, and that the chalice added to the inventory is the chalice given in 1636 by Thomas Howard, earl of Arundel and Surrey. It can be identified in the inventory of 1689 by its motto, Concordia cum candore, and it served afterwards, in 1745 and later, for the communion of the sick. It is happily preserved to this day in the Treasury. It is very likely also that the two silver basons parcel gilt may be those still in the Treasury, as the weight corresponds. But the weight of the other pieces of the plate, the two flagons double gilt and the two cups with covers, does not correspond with those now preserved; and it may be feared that those of 1634 have disappeared with the plate in the Deanery.

The chapter had determined in June 1585 that a certain amount of plate should be bought for the Dean's household use, and this very likely is the plate that appears in the inventory of 1634.

It may be noted that the two great candlesticks are not kept on the altar, but with the communion plate; probably they were set on the altar only at communion time, or when the candles in them were to be lighted. It was not the mediæval custom to keep the candlesticks on the altar when they were not used. In the Islip roll, the altars at Westminster Abbey are without candlesticks;<sup>3</sup> and in the more conservative churches of France this continued to be the custom even into the middle of the last century.<sup>4</sup>

At York it may be noted that the candlesticks in 1634 were likewise kept with the communion plate and the bible and common prayer book covered with crimson velvet and embossed with silver double gilt,<sup>5</sup> which apparently took the place of the ancient textus.

At Dulwich College, however, in this very year, archbishop Laud admonished that the candlesticks and bason should be placed again on the altar, the master confessing he had taken them away and was keeping them in his chamber. The archbishop, it may be noticed, was dealing with people whose next step might very probably be to embezzle the ornaments, unless they were kept in public view.<sup>1</sup>

There were two "communion tables," one new, the other old; the latter had a silk carpet, the expression used in the canons of 1603 for the frontal.<sup>2</sup> And there were others: "a new purple velvet cloth with gold fringe for the communion table and one with a less fringe," also "three carpettes of red silke and golde, one for the communion table and two other for Mr. Deane and Vicedeane's seat on solemne dayes." Thus altogether there were three carpets for the holy table, besides the one on the old. The new purple one was probably made of one suit with the back cloth of purple which excited so much indignation in the puritan mind.

There are "three peices of hanginges at the high altar," probably some arras or tapestry, such as may be found in later inventories. The expression "high altar" in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries has more than one meaning. It may of course mean the chief holy table in a church, which sense it bears in the coronation service of King Charles II.<sup>3</sup> Somner declares at Canterbury: "This Altar was and is called the high Altar."<sup>4</sup> It may also mean the area in which the holy table stands, very much as the Eastern Churches use the expression.<sup>5</sup> Mr. Micklethwaite remembers that thirty-five years ago the vergers of Westminster abbey used the term in this sense. The 'high altar' was the space enclosed by the rails eastward of the quire. Or it may indeed signify the wall behind the altar. It clearly meant this at Wells in the eighteenth century. There it is said : " The high altar was full of niches with images of apostles and saints therein finely painted, which, after the Reformation, were all broken, and the whole plastered up as a plain wall."<sup>1</sup> The Captain, Lieutenant, and Ancient, who sallied forth from Norwich in 1634 to view twenty six counties of England, use the expression 'high altar'; but it is not always clear what they mean. At York they find " the Pulpit standing in the midst between the Quire, high Altar, Archbishop's seat, and Organ" and at Durham there was " a fayre and rich Communion Table, which cost 200<sup>li</sup>. standing at the high Altar, of blacke branch'd Marble, supported with 6. fayre Columns of Touchstone, all built at the Charg of Dr. Hunt the reverend dean : And to adorne it 2. double gilt Candlestickes."<sup>2</sup>

The word is in not unfrequent use before the great Rebellion. James I. goes to St. Paul's on Mid-Lent Sunday in 1620; and the dean and chapter in rich copes " with solemne singing brought the king into the Quire, through which he went into his traverse which was set up for that purpose on the South side of the high Altar."<sup>3</sup> The use of the expression to signify the holy table is denounced in 1629 by a committee of the house of commons.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>2</sup> These travellers speak of the 'high altar' not only in nearly all the cathedral but in the lesser churches that they visited; as at Malmesbury and Arundel. (Lansdowne MS. 213. ff. 341. & 359. An abstract of their journal is printed in Gentleman's Magazine, November, 1858. p. 479.) Lord Scudamore also gave in 1626 " one large Damaske Cloth to cover the High-Altar" to the church of Home Lacy. (Matthew Gibson, A View . . . of . . . Door, Home-Lacy, and Hempsted, Lond. 1727. p. 128. See also G. H. Ross-Lewin, Lord Scudamore, Beverley, 1898. p. 6.)

"A pulpett Cloth of blacke silke and gold with frindge" would have been suitable for Lent or funerals. "One Canopie of white and greene satin," most likely for the archbishop's throne, can be traced downwards as late as 1761. There was also "a canopie of red satten" to hang over the archbishop's seat. This seat was most likely that in the choir; for one of the military travellers noticed in 1635 the ancient throne between the Trinity chapel and the high altar, the "Chaire, couered with sky-colour'd veluet, in which all the Archbishops are install'd, and inthroniz'd."<sup>1</sup>

As in 1585, there are among the communion cloths three of diaper and one of holland.

The 27th of March, for which there were six service books, was the anniversary of the accession of King Charles I. and another generation may need to be reminded that the 5th of November is the anniversary of the Gunpowder Plot, which in 1634 was fresh in all men's minds. While in the choir properly horrified at the plot, the authorities at Canterbury seem to have been inclined to imitate it in another part of their church by keeping "a barrell of gunpowder and half a dozen pounds of bulletts" in the Dark House. The military stores "in the armorie" may be the proceeds of the sale of the copes and other ornaments voted by the chapter in 1570.<sup>2</sup> The seizure of these arms in 1642 was the beginning of great trouble to the church.

The organ in the sermon house is not mentioned amongst the furniture there, having been spoken of at the same time as the quire organ. The lieutenant in 1635 describes it thus. "I then was desirous to see the Chapter House, into w<sup>ch</sup> I was kindly conducted, this they make their Preaching Place, or Church, y<sup>e</sup> rooffe whereof is seal'd wth Irish wood, neat, & richly gilt, the windows correspondent, fayre & rich, & a neat small Organ in her; the handsome, and neat Seats for the

Of the books in the library, notwithstanding the opinion that many had been lost in the great rebellion, nearly all can be identified at the present moment. About six or eight manuscripts and printed books only are missing.

Two copies of this inventory exist, which have been marked respectively A and B. A has been chosen to be printed, as it appears to be the earlier. Some of the items which are interlined in A appear in the text of B; some portions of B also have been lost.

Both appear to be written by the same hand.

A is an indented roll, written on vellum of two membranes,  $42\frac{3}{4}$  inches long by  $6\frac{3}{4}$  inches broad, sewn together. The membranes are respectively  $20\frac{1}{2}$  and  $22\frac{1}{4}$  inches long.

B is also an indented roll, written on vellum of two membranes, sewn together,  $44\frac{3}{8}$  inches long by  $6\frac{3}{4}$  inches broad. The membranes are respectively  $22\frac{1}{2}$  and  $22\frac{1}{4}$  inches long. They come from Canterbury.

INTRODUCTION TO INVENTORY OF 1662.

WITH the making of the inventory of 1634 the first mutterings of the storm of the great rebellion can be heard; and before another inventory of the goods of Christchurch, Canterbury, can be drawn out, the greater part of the furniture set down in the former inventory will have been destroyed.

The beginnings of this destruction were in August, 1642, and we are told of the deeds done by the troopers under Colonel Edwin Sandys<sup>1</sup> in a letter by the Sub-dean of Canterbury, Dr. Paske, intended to be laid before Parliament. The following extract from the letter gives its pith:

Colonell Sandis arriving here with his troops on Friday night . . . . Serjeant-Major Cockaine came to me, and, in the name of the Parliament, demanded to see the Armes of the Church, and the Store-powder of the County, which I presently shewed him, when he possessed himselfe of the Keyes . . . . When the Souldiers entring the Church and Quire, Giant-like began a fight with God himselfe, overthrew the Communion Table, toare the Velvet Cloth from before it, defaced the goodly Skreen or Tabernacle worke, violated the Monuments of the dead, spoiled the Organs, brake downe the ancient Railes and Seates, with the brazen Eagle that did support the Bible, forced open the Cupboords of the Singing men, rent some of their Surplices, Gownes, and Bibles, and carryed away others, mangled all our Service-bookes, and Books of Common-prayer, bestrowing the whole Pavement with the Leaves thereof . . . they further exercised their malice upon the Arras hangings in the Quire, representing the whole Story of our Saviour.<sup>1</sup>

It will be seen that the cause of the entrance of the soldiers into the church was the presence of arms and ammunition which the inventory of 1634 tells us were in the charge of the Chapter. An attempt is made by Culmer to answer this letter, and to put a favourable construction upon these doings of the troopers; but the apology will only be accepted by a Puritan. It is after this sort :

On the 26. of August, 1642. Some zealous Troopers, after they had (by command) taken powder and ammunition out of that Malignant Cathedrall, they fought (it seemes) with the Cathedrall Gods, named in that printed letter: namely Altars, Images, Service-booke, Pricke-song booke, Surplisse, and Organs; for they hewed the Altar-railes all to pieces, and threw their Altar over, and over, and over, downe the three Altar-steps, and left it lying with the heeles upward: they slasht some Images, Crucifixes, and Pricke-song bookes, and one greesie service-book, and a ragged smock of the whore of Rome, called a Surplisse, and began to play the tune of the zealous souldier, on the Organs or case of whistles which never were in tune since.<sup>2</sup>

After this, the Chapter naturally tried to hide their plate, hangings, and painted windows from the zealous troopers. Some of these, as the back cloth of the altar, were found. "Blew Dick"<sup>3</sup> tells us with glee of

<sup>1</sup> See above, p. 174. The Copy of a letter sent to an honourable Lord, by Doctor Paske, Subdeane of Canterbury. London, printed September 9, 1642. 4°. pp. 4 and 5. It is dated Christ-Church Cant. Aug. 30. 1642. It is said to have appeared also in Mercurius Rusticus 1648. The "honourable Lord" was the Earl of Holland. (Antidotum Culmerianum, Oxford, H. Hall, 4°. 1644. p. 2 in m.)

<sup>2</sup> Richard Culmer, Cathedrall Newes from Canterbury, London, 1644. p. 19. In 1635 the Lieutenant from Norwich heard "the fayre organ, sweet, and tunable, and a deep and ravishing consort of Quiristers, and a snowy croud of the Kings Schollers, which were fifty in number." (British Museum, MS. Lansdowne 213. fo. 352. also Gentleman's Magazine, November, 1858. p. 485.)

the (now discovered) rich silver Basin and Ewer, and other sumptuous common Plate of that Cathedrall Corporation, used at Cathedrall Feasts: and the Altar-Basin, and Candlesticks (if they be not conveyed to Oxford) will helpe that worke.<sup>1</sup>

The rich silver basin and ewer no doubt correspond to the "one bason and Ewre parsell guilt 80 ounces Di" which were in the deanery<sup>2</sup> with the flagons, salt, and bowl, described in the inventory of 1634. These doubtless disappeared quickly. But part of the altar plate was more successfully hidden:

And as for their Altar-trinkets, their silver Basin and Candlesticks, the Prelates had hid them from the Troopers, but afterwards sold them to a Merchant in Canterbury, for feare they should be seized on for the publique defence of the Kingdome. But when they heard that a sack posset was eaten out of their Cathedrall Altar-Basin, they were much offended that a consecrated Basin should be so prophaned, and thereupon bought againe their Basin and Candlesticks, which, some affirme, had tallow-candles in them while the sack posset was in eating.<sup>3</sup>

The Arundel chalice and two plates, if not the altar candlesticks, have come down to our times.

Whether the font were destroyed at this time seems uncertain. At Candlemas, 1642, they had begun to pull down the images of the twelve apostles, the four evangelists, the dove within the cover, and our Lord. Culmer in the following passage speaks of 1641, which is old style:

On their Candlemas day at night 1641. Those consecrated Images about their new Cathedral Font were all demolished, and taken away, they knew not how, nor by whom that purification was observed, without Candles: But a few days after, some of those Idols were found in that Cathedral, in a Pulpit, where a Sermon had not bin preached neer 20. years before. . . . they could not endure the pulling down of those 18. Idols of wood and stone.<sup>4</sup>

Of this profane act the chapter seem to have complained to the King as he passed through to Dover with the Queen :

they carryed him to the Font and shewed him the lamentable condition and ruine of their new consecrated Font, and where those Images had stood about it.

Whether the font were completely destroyed by the troopers under Colonel Sandys, or during the "more orderly and thorough Reformation" which began on December 13th, 1643, is not known. But it was destroyed during the troubles of the great rebellion. William Somner then piously "enquired with great diligence for all the scatter'd pieces, bought them up at his own charge, kept them safe till the King's return, and then delivered them to that worthy Bishop; who reedified his Font, and made it a greater beauty of holyness; giving to Mr. Somner the just honour, to have a daughter of his own first baptized in it."<sup>1</sup>

There is evidence of Somner's good acts preserved at Canterbury.

+ Willm. Somner	{	Item to him w <sup>ch</sup> he had payd for bringing the font bowle & other materials of stone & yron from y <sup>e</sup> town into y <sup>e</sup> church ... .. £0 10 0 <sup>2</sup>
-----------------	---	---

The font remained in its place in the second bay of the north side of the nave until the time of the paving of the nave in 1789, when the font was moved into the lavatory, which Gostling imagined to be the baptistery.<sup>3</sup> There it remained until 1896, when it was brought back again to its old place.

When the chapter returned to their church at the King's happy restoration in 1660, they found occasion for a large expenditure. In a paper which they drew up at the time, but which they do not appear to have published, they state that they found the Quire stripped and robbed of her faire and goodly hangings, her Organ and Organ-loft: the Communion table, of the best and chiefest of her furniture and ornaments, with the raile before it, and the skreen of Tabernacle-worke, richly overlayd with gold, behind it. . . . our very Common Seale, our Registers and other books, together with our Records and evidences of all sorts seized and distracted; many of them irrecoverably lost, and the rest not retrieved without much trouble and cost. . . . to carry on the work of perfecting the furniture of our Quire with an Organ, and of our Communion table with Plate and other necessary utensils and ornaments which partly by contract, partly by the estimate of judicious persons we find cannot cost us lesse than £1,000 os. od.<sup>1</sup>

Accordingly we find sums expended upon refurnishing the church and quire in the year following the restoration. The amount spent upon the linen seems considerable even for those days; the damask and diaper must have been handsome and large, for no doubt the ancient custom was followed of enveloping the whole of the Lord's table in linen at the time of the celebration of the Eucharist. They can be identified in the inventory of the communion cloathes, "two thereof damaske, one dyaper." The purple covered kneeling stools round the communion table are no doubt those for which 4 yards of kersey were bought. The two large flagons and the two chalices, now preserved in the Treasury, were probably bought with part of the £132 laid out upon plate. They appear first of all in the inventory; the third of the silver chalices gilt, being probably the Arundel chalice that had happily survived the storm, together with two small silver plates. The hangings for the choir were expensive, and they appear towards the end of the inventory as fair hangings about the communion table and behind the Dean's and Prebends' seats. The "common prayer book to be kept as a record" with "the great seale to it" is beyond all doubt the sealed book still in the library.

To speak of the inventory itself more at length :

No altar candlesticks are mentioned among the plate ; this in itself hardly decides that the present candlesticks were new after 1662, as it may be that they were not brought out from their hiding place until after the making of the inventory. They were certainly in use in 1667, for there is in the Treasurer's account book that year under Officium Sacristae (p. 74) :

June 7. For soddering and gilding again one of our candlesticks ... .. £1 10 0

The new brass Eagle also is not entered. It bears an inscription : Gulielmus Burroughes Londini me fecit anno Domini 1663, and in the Account books there are these entries for that year :

Feuersham to Canterbury per bill at 2 ... £0 9 6
To Mr. Deane for the Eagle a remainder Feb. 18 14 14 0<sup>1</sup>

The reading Feversham may be disputed ; there was water carriage from London to Feversham, and thence the eagle might be carried by land to Canterbury.

Later on there are entries for cleaning the eagle :

Dec. 27. To Dan. Wood for y<sup>e</sup> scouring of y<sup>e</sup>
Eagle ... .. £0 5 0<sup>2</sup>

In Dart's engraving of the choir the eagle is shown<sup>3</sup> ; and it is in the inventory of 1752, but not in that of 1761 ; and we know that in 1772 the eagle had been removed into the library<sup>4</sup> ; but it now stands again in the choir.

In the meantime until the new eagle could come from London the chapter had to be content with " One deske in the middle of the Quier with a greate Bible upon it."

The " One other kneeling deske in the middle of the Quier with two kneeling Cushens" is no doubt for the Litany; and the two cushions show that it was still sung by two clerks according to the mediæval custom. "The Deske where the Litany was usually sung" (an entry which is found later on) was covered with a purple cloth. Many other things had purple covers, kneeling stools and cushions at the Dean's and Prebends' stalls with hangings, and there were four purple velvet cushions and a new velvet purple cloth for the pulpit in the sermon house.

This must be the cloth to which the following entry refers :

July 22. By order of Mr. Dean and Chapter to him y<sup>t</sup> brought y<sup>e</sup> pulpit cloth and Cushion £0 10 0<sup>1</sup>

+ Oct. 17 to Mr. Trusser by bill for y<sup>e</sup> purple

The "One greate Sattin Canopy coulered greene and White with a greate silke fringe of the same couler" continues in successive inventories up to 1761.

The "One piece of Hanging partely wrought with gold like Birds" may be a piece of mediæval stuff that has survived the destructive processes of the rebellion.

The "Two new common prayer books for the Communion table" may very likely be those bought by Mr. Dean :

Nov. 24. to Mr. Deane for two Common prayer books ... .. £1 12 0<sup>3</sup>

From their price it would seem that they were well bound. The "eight new service Bookes with other five" may have been some of these :

The "two silver Rodds for the Vergerers" are in use to this day.

The armoury has now only the frame for the armour. The chapter probably felt that in 1642 they had enough of military engines in their keeping.

No vestments of any kind are entered in this inventory, though we know that material for surplices was bought.

This inventory is written on one membrane 18 $\frac{3}{4}$  inches long by 7 $\frac{3}{4}$  inches wide; the paragraph "In the Preachers Chappell" has been cut across and some part of the inventory is here lost. It is continued on the verso, not however in the same hand. After the last signature of William Jordan there is written vertically close to the left edge: "Inventory of the Church Goods, 1662." It is to be found at Canterbury.

The making of this inventory is duly recorded in the Chapter books:

XVII. INTRODUCTION TO THE INVENTORY OF 1689.

This inventory of 1689 has a great resemblance to that of 1662 as well as to those of the eighteenth century that have come down to us. Most of the items of 1662 can be recognised in all these. Of the more important additions in 1689 to the inventory of 1662 these may be noticed.

“One Bible with plate covers double gilt with a case,” will be the Bible which now lies upon the High Altar at the foot of the Cross. This was the gift of Dr. Turner, when Dean, of whom it is said, “he dedicated to the Holy Table in this Cathedral a costly Folio Bible with covers of beaten silver double gilt.”<sup>1</sup> The covers are bound together by two clasps of plate. On both covers are engraved the arms of Christchurch; above which on the upper cover is: ‘Verbum Domini manet in æternum, 1.Petr. i. 25.’ On the lower: ‘Omnis scriptura divinitus inspirata, 2.Tim. iii. 16.’ The corners have cherubs’ heads engraved in them. The version is that of King James I. and it contains the deuterocanonical books. The edition was printed at Cambridge by Thomas Buck and Roger Daniel, William Marshall engraving the title page. The date is given on the title page of the new testament as 1638.

This bible, bound in precious metal, is placed in the inventory among the vestry stuff that would be set on the altar during a celebration of the Eucharist, much in the same way that the mediæval textus was set on the altar. This practice survived in many cathedral churches until lately, when the restorer, not taking the pains to understand its history, abolished the custom. Both candlesticks and bible are now always on the altar of Christchurch.

In connexion with Dr. Turner's bible may be noted among the "Bookes belonging to the church" two prayer books which are "at the Altar," and described as "bound in Turkey leather with gilt leaves the one redd the other blew." These continue in the eighteenth century inventories, noted amongst the furniture of the quire as Dr. Finch's gift. In the manuscript book of benefactors they are described as follows :

The Hon. Dr. Leopold Finch gave two large Common Prayer Books in folio of the Oxford print Curiously bound w<sup>ch</sup> lye on the top of the Altar.<sup>1</sup>

One of these books may apparently be seen on the south side of the altar in Dart's plate of 1726.<sup>2</sup>

"A faire frame with the comandements written in gold over the Communion Table" is not in the inventory of 1662, which had "a faire Hanging with a gold fringe over the Communion Table." The frame with the commandments may be a substitute for this fair hanging ; or for this "One gilded Sun with three carved and gilded cherubs" which in 1689 lay in Henry IV.'s chapel. This gilded sun was taken down in 1680 by Dr. John Tillotson, who, in 1672, succeeded Dr. Turner as Dean. It is likely to have been put up by Dr. Turner, or with his approval, and it may possibly have been intended to replace the cloth of purple with rays, destroyed in 1642 in the beginnings of the rebellion, at the instigation of 'Blue Dick.'<sup>3</sup> Dr. Tillotson's sympathies would have been with those who thought it undesirable to keep the sun on the reredos if it were an offence to the weak consciences of the Puritans ; and it appears that he did not escape censure from Churchmen for his act. In the language of the Puritans it would have been "sinful compliance" had his action been in favour of anything prelatial.

This removal took place in 1680: for Dr. Tillotson writes on October 19th excusing himself to Robert Nelson, the sturdy churchman, as to a report which he tells him has been spread to the Dean's disadvantage.

"We only took down the sun over the skreen behind the communion table, which was done with so little noise, that several days pass'd before it was taken notice of to be remov'd; and nothing done besides, not so much as the table stirr'd out of its place. I have often heard the same, which you write, but have no great reason to be troubled, when I consider how undeserved a share of good report I have had the fortune to meet withal."<sup>1</sup>

This sun remained near King Henry's tomb till the end of the eighteenth century. Hasted speaks of it there as "a large sun or glory, gilded, having in the middle the letters I.H.S. set up on high, supported by cherubims with expanded wings, painted and gilt, over the screen of the altar. . . . it now lies in the small chapel on the side of King Henry IV.'s tomb."<sup>2</sup>

"One large gilt branch kept now in the vestry to bee hung in a rope by the Eagle in winter time" may be seen very plainly hanging over the Eagle in Dart's plate.<sup>3</sup> It is commonly said to have been the gift of Sir Anthony Aucher, and it bears the arms of Christchurch on one side of the globe that supports the sconces, and the arms of Aucher, impaling Hewitt, on the other. The Aucher shield bears the red hand of a baronet. The baronetcy was created in 1666; the branch must therefore have been made sometime between 1666 and and a little later on<sup>1</sup> we have :

Feb. 5, 1685, payd to y<sup>e</sup> Brasier for taking down and wrapping up y<sup>e</sup> Branch to be layd up. 00. 2. 06.

After Candlemas, which falls on the second of February, artificial light was no longer needed for evensong, and the branch was taken down, having apparently been hung up on All Saints' day. A like entry is found nearly every year in the account books.<sup>2</sup>

It has two rows of sconces, each row having 12 sconces. Gervase tells us that in his time there hung in the middle of the quire a corona which held twenty-four candles, just the same number as this branch.<sup>3</sup>

This branch now hangs in the library. In recent times it used to hang in St. Andrew's Chapel.

Gostling speaks of it as hanging in the choir, next to the prebendal stalls.<sup>4</sup> It is hard to understand why it should have been taken away.

"The picture of King Charles the first over the doore between the Deans and vice-deanes stalls" is also new in 1689. It continues in the inventories in the same place as long as we have information. The presence of the portrait is doubtless due to the piety of Dr. Turner. But it also is now cast out of the quire and hangs in the library. The composition has evidently been much influenced by the frontispiece to Eikon Basilike. The veneration of King Charles continued after the death of Dr. Turner, while Dr. Tillotson was dean, for we find in the chapter accounts for 1679-80, p. 38.

The indifference of the inventory maker to historical considerations is well shown in the description of St. Augustine's chair, one of the most precious relics now left at Canterbury. "One stone chair" is the laconic note. This is the first mention of the chair in the inventories. It is marked among 'the upper monuments,' and the succeeding inventories note it in the same place. Gostling<sup>1</sup> notes 'the patriarchal chair' standing between 'the altar and chapel of the Holy Trinity.' At the enthronization of Archbishop Tenison in 1695 Battely who "was present at that joyful solemnity" says that the Archbishop was "enthronized by Mr. Archdeacon in a Stone-Chair, which is placed upon an ascent behind the Communion-Table, (called by the Ancients, The Patriarchal Chair)."<sup>2</sup> It is shown in this place in Dart's plan.<sup>3</sup>

The armoury seems now to have passed altogether from its original use, though the frame for the armour remains. There is no great change in its contents so long as we have information, but the two surplices have disappeared in 1735. Gostling says it formerly had racks for abundance of pikes: later on it became the singing school and vestry of the choristers.<sup>4</sup>

The re-appearance of the name Martyrdom as part of the church may be noticed, and chapter house and sermon house are both spoken of.

This inventory is written on one piece of vellum indented, 22 $\frac{1}{4}$  inches by 8 $\frac{1}{8}$  inches, endorsed in a hand almost contemporary "Inventory of the goods of the Church, 1689." The document is at Canterbury.

XVIII. INTRODUCTION TO THE INVENTORIES OF THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.

The inventories of the eighteenth century that have come down to us are so alike that it will be best to present them together under one introduction. Very likely a fresh inventory was prepared for each St. Katharine's audit. In 1700-01 we have :

March 23. Given to Mr. Stevens for writing an inventory of Ch: Goods, w<sup>ch</sup> was p<sup>d</sup> him by Mr. Cumberland 00.05.00.<sup>1</sup>

And in a following year 1701-2

Dec. 15. Payd for writing y<sup>e</sup> new inventory 0.5.0.<sup>2</sup>

Again in the accounts for 1726-27 there is :

Oct. 11. To Mr. Henstridge Sacrist for writing an Inventory of the Movables of the Church 00.05.00.<sup>3</sup>

These inventories cannot be discovered at Canterbury at this moment. But for those years, such as 1735 and 1745, of which the inventories have come down to us, there are no charges entered for the making, as appear in the earlier years.

There are preserved at Canterbury four inventories of this century, of 1735, 1745, 1752, and 1761. That of 1735 is written on one piece of vellum not indented, 30 $\frac{1}{4}$  inches long by 12 $\frac{1}{4}$  broad. Differing from the earlier inventories, those of 1745, 1752, and 1761 are written on foolscap paper, 12 $\frac{1}{2}$  inches by 8 $\frac{1}{4}$ , and on several leaves. These three are now kept tied together. Of the inventory of 1761. the central leaf has probably been lost, as the inventory of the vestry, instead of passing into the inventory of quire and other parts of the church, is followed only by the inventory of the engine room and glazing room.

A benefaction which is long noticed in the inventories is the velvet furniture given by Queen Mary II. As she died in 1694 this gift must have been added to the church's goods soon after the taking of the inventory of 1689. It was noted in 1703, thus :

The most Illustrious Queen Mary II. of ever blessed Memory, who honour'd this Church with her Royal Presence provided the Altar, as also the Archbishop's Throne, the stalls of the Dean and Vicedean, and the Pulpit, in this Church, with new and rich Furniture, such as became the piety and bounty of the best of Queens to give, and such as are now a fair Ornament to this Church.<sup>1</sup>

A few more details are given of this gift of Queen Mary's in a manuscript in the chapter library which deals with Dr. Hooper. At the present moment this manuscript cannot be found, and we therefore quote Mr. George Smith's extract made some few years ago.

"Some time after this, the Queen sent for Dr. Hooper, and carried him into her drawing-room, and showed him some pieces of silver stuff and purple flowered velvets, which her Majesty told him, if he approved of, she intended to give to the Cathedral at Canterbury, as she had observed the furniture to be dirty when she was there ; that as there was not enough of the figured velvet, she had sent into Holland to match it, but could not. Her majesty sent down a page of her back stairs, who understood those things to see it done. The altar was furnished with a pane of the figured velvet, and a pane of gold stuff, flowered with silver, and the Archbishop's throne with plain velvet. The figure for both was a ruffed one, of gold, silver, and purple, which alone cost £500."<sup>2</sup>

The church plate in 1761 continues much the same as in 1689, with the addition of a "Strainer" which makes its first appearance in 1745. This strainer is very likely the perforated spoon, still preserved in the Treasury, and the date of its making is probably not far removed from that at which it makes its first appearance in the inventory.

In 1708 the church plate had to be mended :<sup>1</sup>

Nov. 22. Payd to Mr. Nilmes, by the hands of Mr. W<sup>m</sup>. Harris, for gilding and mending the two Chalices & Caet.

07.0.0.

Less than 50 years after this the chalices and patens undergo more severe reparation : Mr. M. Beazeley has been kind enough to transcribe for us the following entry :

St. Kath : 1756.

Plate to be } Also It is Agreed and Decreed that the two New Guilt } Chalices now in use at the Alter shall have New feet putt to them And that they with the Flagons and the large Bason shall be New Guilt And that the two old Paten's (now become useless) shall be sold together with the ffeet which shall be cutt off from the two Chalisses And the Money they shall produce shall be applyed towards defraying these alterations<sup>2</sup>

There was weighed on May 11. 1898 some of the older plate described in the eighteenth century inventories, and still in the Treasury. One flagon was found to weigh  $62\frac{1}{2}$  oz. ; its fellow  $60\frac{1}{2}$ . One chalice with paten 28 oz. 15 dwt. : with paten 21 oz. 18 dwt. Its fellow, with paten 29 oz. 4 dwt. : without, 22 oz. 10 dwt. : all Troy weight. It will be seen that they do not correspond with the weights given in the Inventory of 1634 on p. 260, and judging from the vessels themselves they are much later. The two lesser alms dishes, marked  $20\frac{1}{4}$  oz. and  $19\frac{3}{4}$  oz. that survive still, were, however, probably made in prae-Reformation times, about 1500. If we may trust the position given to the plate in the inventory of 1634 it was kept in some secure place in the undercroft. From 1662 up to 1761 the plate was kept in the Vestry, that is the Treasury, which is the place of keeping to this day.

In 1735 "two large Branches of Candles" appear, instead of one; and this increase is doubtless caused by the addition of Dr. Tenison's branch to that given by Sir Anthony Aucher. It has been said that both formerly hung in the quire. That given by Dr. Tenison still hangs in the presbytery. It is said by Gostling to bear the arms of Tenison and this inscription: "The gift of Dr. Edward Tenison, archdeacon of Carmarthen Anno Dom. MDCCXXVI."<sup>1</sup> It has 24 sconces like its fellow; but it cannot be closely inspected.

To the inventory of 1745. Dr. Shuckford's branch is added apparently after completion. It is then noted as hanging in the north Aisle (p. 302). At the present day it hangs in the Treasury. It has eight sconces and bears this inscription: S. Shuckford S. T. P. D.D. D.Q. 1747.

In 1735, the piece of silk "wrought with dogs Chained to Trees" may very possibly be a remnant of some mediaeval stuff.

The Preacher's Hood is first mentioned in 1735. It was bought in 1724. as this entry shows:<sup>2</sup>

To Michelbourn for a Preacher's Hood 1.19.0.

In 1745, another entry.<sup>3</sup>

Feb. 8. To Plumley for mending y<sup>e</sup> Preacher's Hood—2.6.

The "Iron Grate with Tongs, Poker, Shovel and Bellows" were all bought in 1739, and cost £6. 15. 6.<sup>4</sup> and the "Pewter Bason for washing hands" in 1742. It cost 1s. 6d.<sup>5</sup>

In 1745 and 1752 the minor canons' vestry and singing men's vestry seemed to have adjoined. Gostling tells us that St. Anselm's chapel was "now divided into two rooms, one a vestry for the minor canons, the other for the lay clerks."<sup>1</sup> It has been recently fitted up as a morning chapel.

The survival of the churching veil is recorded in 1735; only in 1745 to be followed immediately by a note of the base uses to which it had been turned.

XIX. ALLOWANCE OF WAX CANDLES IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.

This is an account of the numbers of candles used in Christchurch in 1780. which may correspond in some degree with the mediaeval assize of candles, printed in Somner's Antiquities of Canterbury.<sup>1</sup>

In the Treasurer's accounts of the eighteenth century there are here and there to be found notes of the chandler's bills of which one is here printed as a specimen. In 1722. the chandler is changed to Mrs. Barrett at The Three Kings without Temple Bar. It seems then to have been desirable, if not necessary, to buy the candles in London, and that such things as wax candles were not made, or were not to be had, in Canterbury itself.

Soon after this particular specimen of the chandler's accounts, appears one of the first statements in full how the candles in the quire were to be distributed. A like

In the earlier part of the Account Book for this year referred to above we find :

For notwithstanding the Sacrist and Organist had large allowances this year for their Perquisites, yet this quantity of Wax Candles was all that the occasions of the Church required.

In some twenty years there appears to have been an attempt at some form of peculation by the Sacrist of which the following extracts from the Treasurer's accounts give the story :

N.B. Mr. Henstridge, the last year's Sacrist, having put up, Small Wax Candles of ten in the pound in y<sup>e</sup> Prebend<sup>rys</sup> Stalls instead of those of 6 in the pound, had thereby saved to himself 17 pounds, which he claimed as his Perquisite, beside the 2<sup>lb</sup> allowed as the Sacrist's Fee & 2<sup>lb</sup> as Min<sup>r</sup>. Can: But this not being allowed by the <sup>5</sup>Dean & <sup>s</sup>Prebend<sup>rys</sup> he return'd by their Order 16<sup>L</sup>, which with 13<sup>L</sup> left by him in the new Sacrist's hands made 29<sup>L</sup>. Twenty pound of which being expended last Winter there<sup>6</sup> there remained in my hands 9<sup>L</sup> of ten in the pound for the use of the Church. It having likewise been observed that 2 pair of the large Wax Tapers on the Communion Table were sufficient, viz 1 Pair to Christmas, & 1 to Candlemas, instead of 3 pair which are usually bought, but not 2 thirds of them consumed; it was ordered by the prebendarys present that one of the 3 pair bought the last Winter<sup>1</sup> should be kept entire for the use of this & not be just lighted & then go for a Perquisite to the vesterers, as it seems, has been the Practice, & by which the Church loses twenty shillings, that being the price of a pair of Tapers weighing 8<sup>l</sup> of white wax at 2s 6<sup>d</sup> pr pound.

To prevent such management for the future, it is thought proper that the Wax Candles and Tapers remain in the Treasurers own Custody, or he<sup>2</sup> take a particular Acc<sup>t</sup> of the Sacrist concerning their Distribution<sup>3</sup>

The statement of the rules for the delivery of candles in 1780 is written on one piece of vellum 19<sup>1</sup>/<sub>4</sub> inches by 13<sup>1</sup>/<sub>4</sub>, and is as follows :

The Allowance of Wax Candles for lighting the Church to be the same as Usual. viz :

RUPERT PRINCE PALATINE.

By EVA SCOTT.

Late Scholar of Somerville College, Oxford.

With Photogravure frontispiece.

New and cheaper Edition. Large Crown 8vo, 6s.

"The book is well written in a good style, is throughout most moderate and accurate, and is a worthy record of the gallant and true-hearted Rupert of the Rhine."—Literature.

"This well-illustrated and well-printed book is a very distinct addition to our historical biographies. It is strange that no serious life of the gallant Prince Rupert should have been written till now, but no one could have written with fuller knowledge or more genuine enthusiasm than Miss Eva Scott. She has ignored few if any of the manifold sources of information, printed and manuscript, from which the chequered history of the great soldier can be gleaned, and the result of work which must have been both assiduous and intelligent is a really admirable and complete historical study."—Guardian.

"A final word as to this book itself. It is well got up, well indexed, and well illustrated. There is a preface which gives a general view of the material used, and a series of careful footnotes that will aid the student."—Prof. Yorke Powell in the Morning Post.

"Miss Scott, on the other hand, has not only made herself familiar with Rupert and his surroundings, but is possessed of—what is seldom to be found—a rare talent for biographical presentment. Not only is there no overburdening of the narrative with documentary evidence, but everything of that nature which is introduced strengthens the author's argument instead of distracting the attention of the reader."—Mr. S. R. Gardiner in the English Historical Review.

"Though she properly makes a hero of Rupert, she is never blind to his failings nor does she extol his virtues without the warrant of documentary evidence. In brief, her monograph is a well-considered, impartial piece of work."—Spectator.

ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & Co., WESTMINSTER.

THE HOUSEHOLD OF THE LAFAYETTES.

By EDITH SICHEL.

With Photogravure frontispiece.

New Popular Edition. Large Crown 8vo, 6s.

"In the 'Household of the Lafayettes' Miss Sichel has given a very vivid and picturesque study of French life during the revolutionary period, mainly from the political and social point of view. Her style is on the whole well suited to her subject... The book is a fascinating one, and of far greater interest than the majority of novels. We are carried along from chapter to chapter in very good company, and on very easy wings."—Morning Post.

"Miss Sichel possesses a lively and agreeable style, characterized by a refreshing absence of stock phrases. She does not disgust us with the obvious, or harass us with the unexpected; and her general observations—always a good test of an author's wits—are shrewd and happily expressed."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"The conversations between the First Consul and the General reproduced in this most interesting chapter of an interesting book shed the most instructive light on the character of two of the greatest, probably the greatest Frenchmen that either century had produced. In her laborious and sympathetic biography of the lesser of the two Miss Sichel has evolved a work which for picturesque yet faithful detail, should rank highly among the records of the most eventful period in French History."—Observer.

"We should have liked to quote many passages, picturesque touches of daily life, remarks of real political insight, clear views of the people and the tendencies of the age. But we must reserve space for a few words about Miss Sichel's introduction, which is one of the best and truest pieces of writing that we have met with for a long time."—Spectator.

The Kingdom of the Yellow Robe

Being Sketches of the Domestic and Religious Rites and Ceremonies of the Siamese.

By ERNEST YOUNG.

Fully Illustrated by E. A. NORBURY, R.C.A. and from Photographs.

New Popular Edition. Large Crown 8vo, 6s.

"A pleasantly written little book, popular and light in style. The author, who was connected with the Siamese Education Department, is at his best in the first few chapters, wherein he describes the scenes of the city and the domestic life of the people. His educational duties enabled him to note some specially interesting facts with regard to the extraordinary aptness and intelligence which Siamese children as a rule display. . . ."—Times.

"Of the quaint courtship customs in the strange land where there are no old maids, and of many other curious things, we have, alas! no room to tell. It is with a feeling of regret that we put down this pleasant book, and take leave of so charming and interesting a people as that which inhabits the land of the Yellow Robe. The book is fully illustrated by Mr. E. A. Norbury and from photographs, which add greatly to its interest. It is a book to be read both for entertainment and instruction."—St. James's Budget.

"Here is a book of which I can speak with unstinted praise. It is not often that I find myself longing to get back to any book, unless it be a novel of extraordinary power; but I had this sensation with regard to this volume. It is a book difficult to drop from the first moment it is taken in hand, and one to which the reader returns with real delight. It is partly, one must admit, because there is much fascination in the subject, but it is also because the narrative is so simple, lucid, satisfying."—T. P. O'Connor in the Graphic.

THE ALPS FROM END TO END.

By SIR WILLIAM MARTIN CONWAY.

With a Supplementary Chapter by the Rev. W. A. B. COOLIDGE.

With 52 Illustrations by

A. D. M'CORMICK.

New and revised Edition. Large Crown 8vo, 6s.

"We are glad to see that Messrs. Constable have just reissued Sir William Conway's charmingly written and beautifully illustrated volume. It is a book which all climbers have read with pleasure."—Daily News.

"A high place among these books of climbing which appeal to many who cannot climb, as well as to all who can, will be taken by the very pleasant volume 'The Alps from End to End.'"—The Times.

"There is, perhaps, not another living Alpinist—unless we except Mr. Coolidge who contributes a valuable précis of the topography—who could have combined the requisite knowledge with physical capacity for the task... Sir William Conway's book is as vivid as it is charming... Mr. M'Cormick's illustrations are, indeed, so vivid that many will be tempted to follow 'The Alps from End to End.'"—Standard.

"The amount of variety Mr. M'Cormick can secure in a series of pictures, whose component parts of sky, snow, rock, and ice, must be seen to be believed."—Daily Chronicle.

Among the Himalayas.

By MAJOR L. A. WADDELL, L.L.D.

(Author of "The Buddhism of Tibet.")

With over 100 Illustrations. Large Crown 8vo, 6s.

New and Cheaper Edition.

"The book is moderate in size, beautifully printed on unloaded paper, rich in illustrations exceedingly well reproduced from photographs, conveying an impressive conception of the scenery and people which form their subjects."—The Times.

"This book, in which Major Waddell sets forth the results of his investigation of the Himalayas, will be appreciated by geographers as a valuable contribution to our limited knowledge of a little-explored region. With the exception of Hooker, no European has got nearer to Mount Everest than the author, and his observations of this and the adjacent peaks, in combination with the admirable photographs that he provides, form a feature of the work that deserves special attention."—Morning Post.

The Waterloo Campaign, 1815.

By CAPTAIN WILLIAM SIBORNE.

New Edition. Large Crown 8vo. 6s.

This Work is the most exact, complete, and authoritative account in our language of what is sometimes called The Hundred Days' War, and sometimes The Twenty Days' Campaign; including the Battles of Ligny, Quatre Bras, Waterloo, and Wavre. It is written with great impartiality, being as fair to the French as to the Allies.

Every movement is clearly described; and the name of every Commander and every Regiment engaged, on both sides, is given.

The Work also includes, Regiment by Regiment, the names of all the Officers of the British Army who were at Waterloo; distinguishing such as were Killed, Wounded, or Missing.

All who read it will gain a very clear insight into the Methods of Military Strategy as they were practised by the great Captains of that Age.

The volume concludes with the Duke of Wellington's celebrated Waterloo Despatch.

"For commercial and for other reasons, one should have an eye on what is being done in this 'Russian Province of the North', where Mr. Engelhardt has already made so notable a mark. Apart from the solid information and the masses of statistics the book contains, the 'Wayside Sketches' of life, manners and scenery around the fringes of the White Sea and the Arctic Ocean will be found pleasant and profitable reading. "In these pages bills of fare for one week, according to the season of the year, have been carefully arranged for a household of six or eight persons. After a perusal of these menus, some housekeepers may imagine that it would be impossible to provide such a variety of food at so small a cost. The author, however, shows that with proper care and economy, it can be accomplished. The work is specially suitable to those who have carefully to consider the question of ways and means."—The Morning Post.

"Should prove a very good guide to young housekeepers beginning their business. It is an economical little work and certainly shows how to get the most out of the sum allowed."—Spectator.

Her words appeal to a very wide class, and will bring relief to many a home where a real desire for pretty rooms exists. Its many chapters, written by an acknowledged authority cannot fail to be useful."—Woman.

"A useful book, treating of the arrangement, decoration and furnishing of a house of medium size, to be maintained by a moderate income. It contains many useful hints; and by means of illustrations gives good ideas of how best to arrange a house and to provide useful accessories."—The Weekly Sun.

FATE THE FIDDLER.

By HERBERT C. MACILWAINE.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Places beyond question the right of Mr. MacIlwaine to be considered the successor of Henry Kingsley as the novelist of Australia. It does not require a knowledge of the country or a particularly enthusiastic Imperialism to interest one in 'Fate the Fiddler.' Whatever scene the author had chosen for his tale would have been illumined by his power of seizing the essential things in nature and in character."—Speaker.

"We have certainly never met with anything on Australian life that can be classed with 'Fate the Fiddler.'"—Manchester Guardian.

"Every page is enriched with delightful descriptions of Australian scenery."—Daily Telegraph.

"It proclaims its author as a serious and promising literary artist who must be reckoned with, whose work must be watched book by book as it appears, whose achievement is already notable."—Academy.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

DINKINBAR.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

"There is good food for thought as well as a right good story in Mr. MacIlwaine's record of 'Dinkinbar.'"—Daily Chronicle.

---

THE OLD DOMINION.

By MARY JOHNSTON.

Third Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"We have had of late an abundance of romance, but not better than this. The heroine is adorable. The whole book is a masterpiece of romance."—British Weekly.

"It is an exciting narrative of a perilous adventure, and of a hate that was converted into love as strong as death. The characters are drawn with a strong hand, and the interest is sustained to the end."—Punch.

Over 200,000 copies sold.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

BY ORDER OF THE COMPANY.

Fifth English Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Miss Mary Johnston's former novel prepared the reader to welcome her name on a title-page, and 'By Order of the Company' will not disappoint such expectations, for it is quite as good reading as 'The Old Dominion.' The picture of the very earliest days of Virginia is excellently painted, and the personages of the story are sympathetic and interesting."—Spectator.

"If 'The Old Dominion' had not previously attracted attention, her new story must have assured her reputation."—Manchester Guardian.

"So exact in historical colour, so rich in glowing imagination and stirring adventure, so full of pictorial charm and poetic description, so charged with emotion and tender melancholy was 'The Old Dominion,' that it was with lively anticipations that I turned to 'By Order of the Company,' and I find no justification for disappointment."—The Echo.

"This admirable story is in every respect equal to the author's earlier work, 'The Old Dominion' . . . We are sure every reader of her new book will pronounce it a brilliant success."—The British Weekly.

"'By Order of the Company' has more than fulfilled the promise of 'The Old Dominion' . . . a tale of ingenious, exciting adventure, at once catching the attention, and holding it from first to last."—The Globe.

"Will hold the reader enthralled from first to last."—Publishers' Circular.

"There is not a dull page in the book."—The Sphere.

The Taming of the Jungle.

By C. W. DOYLE.

The Cover specially designed by J. T. NETTLESHIP.

3s. 6d.

“‘The Taming of the Jungle’ is one of the most striking books of Indian life that we have seen since Mr. Kipling produced his ‘Plain Tales from the Hills,’ and it does not suffer by comparison with the work that made Mr. Kipling famous.”—Literature.

“One needs no previous knowledge of this folk of the Terai, away there under the Himalayas, to appreciate the insight and observation which characterise every stroke of the charming sketches. It would be altogether unfair to say that the author owes his inspiration to Mr. Kipling. He speaks from long and close experience; and, what is better still, his note is his own . . . In a brilliant illustration by Mr. Nettleship, full of fire and movement, the beasts of the jungle are seen careering across the back of the book. The covers, in fact, have been drawn as well as any huntsman could do it.”—Punch.

“The author has evidently lived among the people and closely studied their ways, so that, while the picture that he presents is engaging, it also conveys a sense of verisimilitude.”—Morning Post.

“I am impelled to say a word in warm praise of the extremely pleasant little book of Indian stories, without caring a fig for the purely academic question as to whether they would have been put forth exactly as they stand had Mr. Kipling never lived. Dr. Doyle knows the folk of the Terai intimately; he has the power of spinning a good story out of the good stuff with which his memory is stored.”—T. P. O’Connor in M. A. P.

The Shadow of Quong Lung.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

SUNNINGWELL.

By F. WARRE CORNISH.

Second Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"No more agreeable picture of a clergyman has been drawn since 'The Vicar of Wakefield.' No more sympathetic or humorous treatment of a provincial society has been published since 'Cranford.' It is only the form of these two books which suggests comparison, for 'Sunningwell' stands by itself and owes nothing to any one model."—Speaker.

"This is a scholarly, well-written, and interesting book, not without a good deal both of humour and of pathos."—Manchester Guardian.

"The views put forward throughout the volume, whether or not the writer's own, are always worth considering, even when we dissent from them—certainly they cannot be lightly put aside. And the book is excellent reading, for it is full of vigorous and weighty sayings and full of humour too."—Guardian.

The Catacombs of Paris.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

---

The Quest of Mr. East.

By JOHN SOANE.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

"An original and well thought out novel."—Academy.

"Well worthy of careful study."—Scotsman.

"It is clever and thoughtful."—Pall Mall Gazette.

WORKS BY FIONA MACLEOD.
THE DOMINION OF DREAMS.

Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"For the gifts of Miss Fiona Macleod, it is impossible to use the common words of gratitude. To people who live in a paved city, or a half-paved suburb, dimly conscious of sky and aware of the voice of the wind only when a gale sings in the telegraph wires, her writings are as the water of life. We know not, neither do we care, whether Fiona Macleod be man, woman, or spirit, though we suppose her treasure is hidden in an earthen vessel. Enough for us that she hears, as only poets hear, the old authentic voices of the world."—Daily Chronicle.

"Of the extreme beauty and subtlety of Miss Fiona Macleod's writing there is no need now to speak. She has caught the habit of the true Gael; who sees an idea in a picture and expresses a thought in a metaphor."—Literature.

Green Fire.

A Story of the Western Islands.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

"There are few in whose hands the pure threads have been so skilfully and delicately woven as they have in Fiona Macleod's."—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Laughter of Peterkin.

A Re-telling of Old Stories of the Celtic Wonder-world.

Illustrated by SUNDERLAND ROLLINSON.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

"The writing is full of beauty and passion."—St. James Gazette.

Caleb West.

By F. HOPKINSON SMITH.

(Author of "Tom Grogan," etc.)

Second Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"It is a long time since we have met with so satisfactory a book as 'Caleb West.' Readers must go to the book for themselves, and enjoy its pathos, its humour, its rich character-drawing, and its thrilling adventures, as we must confess that we have done."—Speaker.

In the Shadow of the Crown.

By M. BIDDER.

With an introduction by MAURICE HEWLETT.

Second Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"A remarkable book and one of great promise."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Over 200,000 copies sold.

JANICE MEREDITH.

A Story of the American Revolution.

By PAUL LEICESTER FORD.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Mr. Ford who is already a distinguished American writer, is greatly to be congratulated on a very delightful novel, which, no less from its historical than for its literary merit, will considerably add to his reputation."—The Daily News.

"The story is an excellent and carefully executed romance of love and war."—Spectator.

"Janice and her girl friends are delightful."—Literature.

"Mr. Ford has the right feeling for romance; he knows how to bring his reader into the thick of the excitement and give him the right thrill of personal participation in the struggle, and he keeps his grip on the reader's attention through a long and interesting book."—The Speaker.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

The Story of an Untold Love.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

"You must by all means read 'The Story of an Untold Love.'"—Truth.

"The book may be commended to readers of all classes and tastes."—Athenæum.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

Tattle Tales of Cupid.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

"There is not one of them that is not dainty and entertaining."—Daily Mail.

"A very attractive and highly entertaining book by the clever author of 'The Story of an Untold Love.'"—Observer.

DRACULA.

By BRAM STOKER.

Sixth Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"In seeking a parallel to this weird, powerful and horrible story, our minds revert to such tales as 'The Mysteries of Adolpho,' 'Frankenstein,' 'Wuthering Heights,' 'The Fall of the House of Usher,' and 'Marjery of Quelher.' But 'Dracula' is even more appalling in its gloomy fascination than any one of these."—Daily Mail.

"It is horrid and creepy to the last degree. It is also excellent, and one of the best things in the supernatural line that we have been lucky enough to hit upon."—Pall Mall Gazette.
